THE

HISTORY OF THE DESCENDANTS

OF

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The Boulder-Monument

Bridge Street Cemetery - Northampton, Mass.

A STATEMENT

According to B. W. Dwight's "History of the Strong Family," John Strong was the first Strong in America and was the progenitor of nearly all the Strongs now here, along with their co-relatives. According to Governor Caleb Strong, whose statement Dwight quotes in full, Vol. 1, page XXVI, XXVII, John Strong came on the "Mary and John" in 1630 and married Abigail Ford in 1635 or 1636. (Some genealogists place his coming—not Abigail's coming—as late as 1635. I may say that, aided by the splendid New York Library, I have gone over the evidence, and believe that Governor Strong's statement that John Strong came on the "Mary and John" will stand.)

Thomas Ford, whose name is on this monument, was a man of force and character. Three other daughters married Roger Clap, Richard Lyman and Aaron Cook—progenitors of distinguished American families. John Strong and Abigail Ford had a family of 15 or 16 children. Before he died in 1699 there were about him 150 descendants. He was in or near the beginnings of Dorchester, Hingham, Taunton, Mass., and Windsor, Conn. About 1660, he and Abigail settled in Northampton, Mass. He was there the first ruling elder—and for nearly 40 years, until his death, in 1699.

While occupying the pulpit of the First Church, Northampton, July, 1928, I found that no monument had been erected in memory of these progenitors of the Strong family. A few of us put our minds together, and the result is the boulder monument.

Chief credit is due Miss Harriet J. Kneeland, Northampton, for the completion of the project. While her brother secured the boulder from the hills, and I had the pleasure of passing the hat, she carried through the plans of setting and cutting the boulder, and preparing the tablet. The cost was: Boulder, $18; Setting boulder, $50; Tablet, $48; Setting tablet, $70; Total, $186.

Descendants of Elder John Strong and Abigail Ford (numbering tens and tens of thousands) as they visit Northampton, Mass., may now see this boulder-monument, in memory of their sturdy and excellent forebears. The Clapps, Lymans and Cooks will also be interested in the name of Thomas Ford, whose daughters were the women-founders of these illustrious American families. I predict that many reunions will be held about this rock, as the decades and centuries pass—and increasingly as automobiles and aeroplanes multiply.

This statement is made for the contributors. It will be filed in the Forbes Library, Northampton, along with the receipts.

THE

HISTORY OF THIS BOOK.

In preparing the history of the Dwight family for publication, the author obtained, in tracing out their frequent intermarriages with the Strongs, so much of the genealogy of this large and honorable family, that, after much reflection on the necessary demands of so great an enterprise, he determined at last to undertake also the preparation of their family history. And this he now offers first of the two to those interested in its details, designing to follow its publication soon with that of his paternal ancestry and kindred. No one could know better than he, after five years of diligent industry in his previous endeavor, what would be the cost, in time, patience, strength and money, of his new effort. In his history of the former family there were even in the third generation but three founders of families; but with the Strongs how different! Elder John Strong began the family history with 18 children, 15 of whom had families, and 88 of their children are on record in this book as heads of families. There were doubtless a dozen more. From the third generation downwards, the author's task was nearly 30 times greater, therefore, in tracing his maternal ancestry and kindred, than his paternal. When first seriously meditating the vast attempt, he felt, like one standing on the banks of a wide, strong stream lying between him and victory, just enough excited with fear at the dimensions of the prospect before him, to be all the more resolved and eager to push into "the sea of difficulties," that spread everywhere in view.

By much more time and toil freely lavished upon this large field of research, he feels sure that many great and satisfying results in various directions, now unattained, would be realized. But he offers here gladly to all, who have a common heritage with him in the lineage of the Strong family, the large array of facts which he has been able to procure, by more than four years of unswerving attention to the work of tracing their history, from its first beginnings in this country to the present hour. Much, if not most, of the time, he has given from ten to twelve and thirteen hours daily, not only ungrudgingly but delightedly, to this great effort and wholly at his own charges. It has been by a most ample and persistent correspondence, at the rate much of the time of some 2,500 letters per year, and by an abundant exploration of family histories, town histories, town records and monumental inscriptions, that he has been enabled to construct the historical memorial of the Strong family which is here erected and which will stand as he hopes to the end of time. Hundreds of volumes have been ransacked for dates and details of interest, in various public libraries in Boston, New York and Brooklyn, and in the valuable genealogical library of D. Williams Patterson, Esq., of Newark Valley, Tioga Co., N. Y., whose liberal aid to fellow-explorers is only surpassed by his own unbounded enthusiasm in his own researches. Various towns in New England, especially in Massachusetts and Connecticut, have been personally visited and searched thoroughly for facts, as Northampton, Belchertown, Williamsburgh, Southampton and Westfield, Mass., and in Connecticut, Milford, Middletown, Durham, Chatham, Colchester, Lebanon, Coventry, Hebron, Bolton and Guilford. To hundreds of postmasters, town-clerks, clergymen, and men of antiquarian lore, all over the land, thanks are due for the prompt and kindly manner, in which they have furnished great numbers of helpful items of information, which, though small in themselves, have been of large aggregate value in the end. Such a pile of genealogical facts concerning a family of such large volume in its earlier years, and spreading almost without limit over the fruitful fields of this new world, for nearly two centuries and a half, can no more be reared without the cooperative aid of multitudes of willing hearts and hands, than the immense pyramids of Egypt themselves. It is not the author's fault that the results of his inquiries here presented are not grander still. No one who has not attempted genealogical researches on a large scale can have any adequate idea of the difficulty of obtaining facts desired. At least 200 letters out of several thousands, which should have been answered to the full, fell into the hands of those that were either so satisfied with what their fathers had done for them, or so dissatisfied, that they did not care to do aught for their better or longer remembrance in the world. With the few who have thus maintained a careless or resolved silence, and preferred to wrap themselves and their forefathers in dumb forgetfulness, stands another class of inefficient helpers, who, after giving a brief and superficial outline of their family history for a generation or two, could never be tempted, or won, to give any more fulness or definiteness to the rude picture that they had so hastily drawn. Probably no one who has undertaken such a great labor ever had more helpers, or those that were more generous and enthusiastic in their efforts to aid the self-offered historian of the family in his work. All thanks to the great number of such noble souls.

The Strongs that have shown the most interest in perpetuating the records of their own special branches of the family have been Hon. Roger Strong, Esq., a lawyer in New York; Hon. Stephen Strong, M. C., a lawyer in Owego, N. Y., Rev. Paschal N. Strong of New York, and Gen. James Strong a lawyer in Buffalo. The only general view of the family history ever prepared before the present one, was a brief sketch covering two or three printed pages, which was prepared by Gov. Caleb Strong of Northampton, and sent by him, then 32 years of age, May 26, 1777, to Rev. Joseph Strong of Williamsburgh, Mass. (the author's great-grandfather), and manifestly at his solicitation. Twenty-one years afterwards (June 22, 1798), when he was an U. S. Senator, he seems to have lost the draft of his original letter, if not also the documents on which it was founded, and to have requested a copy of it from his former correspondent, who, at the date above given, replied to his request with the following brief introduction: "Hon. and dear sir: In compliance with your request signified in your favor of the 6th instant, I transmit to you the following extract of an account of Elder John Strong and his descendants compiled and transmitted to me by yourself in your letter of May 26, 1777, viz: that, etc." The original letter the author has seen and handled; it is in the possession now of Mrs. Eliza Jane (Strong) Merritt, the great-granddaughter of Rev. Joseph Strong and wife of Rev. Elbridge W. Merritt, who reside now (1870) on the old family homestead in Williamsburgh. "The extract of Gov. Strong's original account" of the family history in general terms, in the second generation and partly in the third, was several years ago printed, and somewhat widely scattered among different branches of the family. At least a dozen copies of this very brief view of the history of the family for the first 80 years of its existence have been kindly sent to the author at different times. With this scanty knowledge of its early beginnings and subsequent development, the family have contented themselves, in all parts of the land, for 90 years past until now. And that the exceeding strangeness of this wide-spread indifference to a thorough acquaintance with their worthy ancestry may appear as fully to others as to the author, he here places it in print anew. This he does the more readily and thankfully, as, without this early memorial of the family as a guide, he would never have known where to search for the facts that had lain so long hidden in the dark. The few little seeds that Gov. Strong scattered upon the waters a century ago, in his youth, with so little thought of their ultimate value, have been the source, to a great degree, of the large harvest of facts here gathered. Behold then what was known of the great family of Strongs a hundred years ago, and has been idly allowed to be all that should be known for another hundred years afterwards except in a very few specific branches and by very few persons.

"An Account of Elder John Strong and his Descendants.

"He was born and lived in England at Taunton, in Somersetshire. His father, whose name was Richard, died while his son was young. His grandfather, who was a Roman Catholic, lived to be very old, but died before his grandson left England. He came to America in the year 1630. He sailed from Plymouth in England, in company with Mr. Warham, Maverick, Mason, Clap, etc., and arrived at Nantasket on the 30th of May, of that year, and settled in Dorchester. He married his first wife in England, who died immediately after landing in this country; leaving two young children, the youngest of which died in two months after its mother. He m. his 2d wife, whose name was Abigail Ford (she was sister to Capt. Clap's wife), at Dorchester in 1635, or 1636. He afterwards removed from Dorchester to Windsor in Connecticut, and with four others, to wit: Messrs. Mason, Ludlow, Wolcott, and Stoughton, was appointed to superintend and bring forward the settlement at that place. He lived there several years and from thence removed to Northampton, in the year 1659 or 1660, where he died, April 14th, 1699, about 94 years old. He was the first ruling elder of the church in Northampton. His wife d. July 6, 1688. A sister of his came with him from England, who afterwards m. a person by the name of Dean. He had 16 children, beside that which d. young as above mentioned. By his first wife he had:

I. John, who lived at Windsor, and had issue, John, Jacob, Josiah, etc.

By his second wife, Abigail Ford (who d. July 6, 1688), he had issue:

II. Thomas, who by his first wife, Mary (who d. Feb. 20, 1670) had the following children:

1. Thomas b. Nov. 16, 1661: m, to Mary Stebbins, Nov. 17, 1683.
2. Mary, b. Aug. 31; 1663, and d. in August, 1684.
3. John b. March 9, 1665.
4. Hewet, b. Dec. 2, 1666.
5. Asahel, b. Nov. 14, 1668, who removed to Farmington, in Connecticut, and left two sons, Asahel and John.
6. Joseph, who removed to Coventry about the year 1717; where he d. upwards of 90 years of age, and left two sons, Joseph and Phinehas, who both lived to old age.

By his second wife Rachel Holton (whom he m. Oct. 10, 1671), he had:

7. Benjamin, who lived a bachelor at East Guilford, and d. an old man.
8. Adino, who lived at Woodbury and left a numerous family.
9. Waitstill, who lived at Northampton and left many descendants.
10. Rachel, b. July 15, 1679, m. to Nathan Dudley of Guilford, May 6, 1698.
11. Selah b. Dec. 22, 1680, who lived at Setauket on Long Island and had five sons: Thomas, Selah, Benajah, Joseph, and Benjamin, and had five daughters.
12. Benajah, b. Sept. 24, 1682.
13. Ephraim, b. Jan. 1, 1685, lived at Milford, and left but one son, named Ephraim.
14. Elnathan, b. Aug. 20, 1686, who lived at Woodbury, where he d. short of middle age and left a young family.
15. Ruth, b. Feb. 4, 1688, m. to Wm. Dudley of Guilford.

III. Jedediah, who, by his first wife, Freedom Woodward (whom he m. Nov. 18, 1662), had issue:

1. Elizabeth, b. June 9, 1664, m. to Ebenezer Wright Sept. 16, 1684.
2. Abigail, b. July 9, 1666, m. to Thomas King Nov. 17, 1683.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

I have put all the sons before any of the daughters, for I have never been able to learn anything more of the order of their births than that of the sons and daughters by themselves. They were all born before the family came to Northampton except the youngest son and the youngest daughter.

"May 26, 1777.

CALEB STRONG."

Such was the poor imperfect thread, and yet very valuable to the author, that he had in his hands at the beginning of his work and all that he had, with which to trace his way, as he might, through the labyrinth of the past 250 years. All thanks to Gov. Strong, that he cared enough for the fates and fortunes of his kindred, to prepare this scanty memorial of them! Like many other things in life, it had a suggestive value far greater than its real one. The Strong family has been so large that an adequate presentation of its history must take on somewhat of an encyclopædic character. What is here presented is an indication of what might be done on a still larger scale by a much greater expenditure of time and money. This account of the family has proved to be in the end one-third larger than was promised, and has cost therefore one-third more for its publication than was anticipated.

When approaching the end of his labors the author prepared the following circular, some 1500 copies of which were sent by him and the publisher to such members of the family, as seemed most likely, by their general social position, to be both able and disposed to subscribe for the book.

"The History of the Descendants of Elder John Strong, of Northampton, Mass., by Benjamin Woodbridge Dwight, of Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., author of "the Higher Christian Education," and of "Modern Philology, First and Second Series."

The undersigned proposes to publish this work, as soon as a sufficient number of copies shall have been subscribed for. The author has given, for four years past and more, time, strength and money, without stint, to its preparation, on the broadest and most thorough basis possible. Its details cover the history of the Strong family in all its branches, male and female, direct and collateral, from the first settlement of the country to the present hour — embracing some 15,000 names or more. It will consist of two large octavos of some 600 pages each, with indexes, and be printed in the best style of the art, as to type and paper. Its price will be $12 per copy.

The sale of genealogical works is by necessity limited, and far more so than is commonly supposed.

The subscriber has published several of the best Family histories of the day, and has never sold more than 500 copies of any one of them, even after several years time. But few copies will be printed beside those ordered. Those to whom this circular comes are solicited to subscribe at once for one or more copies, and to induce others of their acquaintance to subscribe also. The author and publisher are only waiting for a sufficient number of subscriptions to proceed at once to the work of issuing it from the press. It is hoped that many will subscribe for several copies apiece, with the idea of bestowing them not only upon children and friends unable to procure them for themselves, who will greatly value their possession in future years; but also upon the libraries of public institutions, for which such books will ere long be eagerly sought, and unless obtained at the time of publication, can not be obtained at all.

Elder John Strong, the founder of the Strong family in this country, had 18 children, and all but two of them by Joanna Ford, his second wife. Of these 18 children, 15 had families, and several of them nearly as large as his own. The ground to be traversed has therefore been immense. The results obtained are of the most satisfactory kind.

Subscriptions may be sent to the author or to the publisher.

JOEL MUNSELL, Publisher,
Albany, N. Y."

The result obtained during the six months or more that intervened is indicated in the subscription list here presented :

The first subscription received was from Lyman Strong of Cleveland, O., who was by the author's side when he made it, and who said "put me down for 20 copies at least." The next was made by William A. Reynolds, Esq., of Rochester, N. Y., who wrote : "I will take 25 copies at any rate and 40 if necessary," and afterwards subscribed for 5 more for various college libraries. These whole-souled responses insured at once in the author's heart the certainty of the publication of the history of the Family. That there were others also, who had a generous estimate of the value to the family of a long series of earnest efforts, to collect and preserve all of its records that could possibly be obtained, will be made manifest by the subjoined list of subscribers. Had any considerable number of like means manifested a similar interest in this great endeavor, to obtain and preserve, forever, a true and full history of the Strong Family, to that evinced by a few, the good cause would have literally moved off on wings of gold with feathers of silver, instead of just standing alive upon its feet as now, without being reduced to the necessity of asking leave to be. A family history, however well prepared, can thrive only as those belonging to the family breathe into it the breath of life. It cannot trust to its merits, as in other departments of literary effort, where the field is the world, or makes its growing way to public favor through successive editions. What the family choose to do for it is all the support or honor that it can receive.

[Small as the number of copies here subscribed for is, it is worth the while perhaps to state to any who would like to know the fact, that it is by far the best show yet made, in advance, of the supporters of any great genealogical undertaking in this country.]

It is pleasant to turn next to the grateful recognition of the valuable services of the many appreciative friends and allies of the author in his genealogical endeavors.

Thanks are due first and most of all to my ever helpful wife who has by her personal sympathy and aid in various ways assisted me practically beyond any and all others in my great undertaking.

The following contributors of facts and dates deserve to be mentioned. in terms of special thankfulness, for their abounding good will:

The engraved likenesses, all on steel plates, which appear in the work, were each and all directly sought by the author and generously furnished by the several parties whose faces they represent among the living. Those of the departed were furnished with like generosity by the following persons: Gov. Caleb Strong's, by his granddaughter, Mrs. Martha A. Harris of New London, Ct.; Prof. Theodore Strong's by Mrs. Lucy Strong of Piermont, N. Y., his widow; Hon. Edward Southworth's of W. Springfield, Mass., by his son Hon. George C. S. Southworth of W. Springfield; those of her father, Henry Strong, Esq., of Norwich, Ct., and of her uncle Rev. Dr. Nathan Strong of Hartford, Ct., by Mrs. Mary E. Gulliver of Norwich; that of George Strong, Esq., of New York, by his son George T. Strong, Esq., of N. Y.; that of Benjamin Strong, Esq., of N. Y., by his daughter, Mrs. Sarah H. Dering of Utica, and Charles E. Strong, Esq., of New York, his grandson. That of Mrs. Sophia W. Dwight was furnished by the author, and is only to be criticised as not equal in beauty to its original. Twelve of the portraits were prepared expressly for this work; those of Prof. Theodore Strong; Mrs. Sophia W. Dwight; George W. Strong, Esq.; Benjamin Strong, Esq.; George T. Strong, Esq.; Judge Selah B. Strong; Rev. Dr. Dorus Clarke; Hon. W. A. Reynolds; Hon. Selah Strong of Milford, Ct.; Prof. Charles Avery; Hon. Rush R. Sloane; and Benjamin W. Dwight; all but two of them prepared by Mr. John C. Buttre of New York.

The likenesses of several others were also sought but in vain, as of Prof. Edward Robinson, D.D., of New York; Prof. Ebenezer S. Snell of Amherst Coll., Mass.; Judge William Strong of the U. S. Supreme Court; Prof. Henry B. Smith, New York; Prof. Theodore W. Dwight, New York; Lyman Strong, Esq., Cleveland, O.; Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Strong, Ithaca, N. Y.; Prof. Charles Lee, Peekskill, N. Y.; Charles Strong, Esq., New York; Cyrus Curtiss, Esq., New York; Hon. Demas Strong, Brooklyn, N. Y. Rev. Edward E. Hale, Boston, Mass.; Gen. Strong Vincent, Erie, Pa.; Rev. Dr. H. G. O. Dwight, Constantinople; Rev. Dr. William Allen, Northampton; and others.

One, fond of promoting the higher interests of the church and of the state, soon learns to look with quiet indifference upon the adverse judgments of those, who depreciate all forms of human effort that do not tend to the immediate personal advantage of those that undertake them. Lest any of his own posterity should ever think, with some of his contemporaries, that the author did really and absolutely waste his time, in devoting it to these genealogical researches, he here carefully states, for their benefit, that, while pursuing them, he also instructed his own children from two to three hours daily in their studies, and preached on the sabbath in neighboring towns, as Paris, Sauquoit, Deansville, and Hanover, chiefly the latter two places. He is sure that any one, already well, will always find in the most hearty, joyous industry for great and worthy ends, the surest means of health as well as of usefulness and happiness. How contentedly spoke Cicero, when pleading for the poet Archias, of his own fondness for literary occupations, in the midst of his professional labors! "Who can justly find fault with me, if what time others give to late hours of festive pleasure, what to games of dice, what to out-of door amusement, so much I should take to myself for the pursuit of these studies." There is a great deal of knowledge eagerly sought among men, and much honored both in the seeking and procuring, which brings, when obtained, far less wealth to the heart and improvement to the character, than that concerning ties of consanguinity, which are themselves divinely ordered, and when rightly appreciated and improved most divinely blessed. Surely in the historic outgrowths of family life there ought to be found in this country the highest and brightest proofs of the best Christian civilization of the world. Is a great painter, no matter how great, thought to have misdirected his energies, who for years of quiet unobserved toil has wrought out with labor-loving care the picture of a few great souls grouped together in but one single brave or happy moment of their history, a picture to be seen at the best by but few, and to be felt and cherished, as "a thing of joy forever," by a little minority even of those so fortunate? What a low sense of the beauty and value of high historic art, and what degeneracy of moral feeling likewise are manifested, in the idea that an endeavor to preserve the memory in living freshness through all time of thousands of noble men and women, to whose true characters and deeds and those of others like them, America owes now and will forever owe its intellectual and moral greatness and its power among the nations, should be deemed a cheap or at least quite questionable way of spending one's time and force, for four brief happy years of patient, ever hopeful, and at last successful effort. Thousands of gratified inquirers into the facts of their ancestral history will, long after the false ideas and feeble aims and efforts of most of the present generation have spent themselves for nought, pronounce an indignant negative upon any such low estimate of the utmost painstaking zeal for their profit and pleasure. Alas! for the moral pettiness of those, the many, who if a mine of wealth for the pocket could be found in such researches would admire and praise, and even envy those who perseveringly delved year after year into them, but who, since the gauge of pecuniary value can not be successfully applied, fail to see anything worthy of a wise man's interest in their pursuit.

The author has encountered in his work quite a number of two somewhat opposite classes of persons. One consists of those who feel sure that such a great enterprise must have been undertaken as a speculation, and that "there is money in it;" and they cannot understand how a man in his prime can willingly and much more enthusiastically devote himself to anything but money making. A few of these have proposed to cast anchor by the author in season, and secure for themselves a portion of this newly discovered mine of personal advantage.

The other class has "wished well to the noble cause for its own sake," and "hoped and believed that one so zealous in promoting it would be abundantly remunerated in the end for his great outlay of time, strength and money," and that on the plan of their not subscribing at all for the work, "so many others surely will," or, of their subscribing while in the possession of ample means, for a single copy, and that quite daintily, "the book is so expensive." Most will pay largely and cheerfully for material pleasures that gratify their tastes, appetites and even passions; but how few seem to think that intellectual or moral pleasures, and the labor necessary for their procurement, deserve any large or even adequate pecuniary expenditure, on their part! Lawyers and surrogates tell us, that no one knows what unlovely demonstrations human nature can make of itself on a large scale, until he comes to see the usual course of things among near relatives, in the settlement of estates. Nor can genealogists bring any very favorable report of the existence of a general disposition, even among the cultivated classes of society, to put questions of money second to those of family-feeling, money, not in its aspects of needful use, but in those of mere capricious self-indulgence. What men will actually do to promote a good cause, what they will freely give for it, what they will suffer for it, these are the modes of measuring their otherwise latent sense of its value. If a man grudges for a full and faithful history of his kindred, for hundreds of years, the expenditure of such a little sum from his abundant resources, as would only suffice to buy a cheap garment soon worn out, or to meet the expenses of a day's travel or two, or to buy some petty personal ornament, easily lost, a sum that would not pay for a good picture of a sheep, or a dog, how small must be his curiosity concerning days gone by! how poor his veneration for ancestral worth! how feeble his gratitude for those who walked with such firm and joyous footsteps before him on the pathway of duty to God and man! and how unfortunate the lesson that he teaches his children and children's children concerning the preservation of his own memory among themselves!

There are few forms of poor manners that seem more utterly ungracious, than those exhibited to every genealogical investigator, by a small number of persons, who allow themselves to be addressed again and again concerning the history of their immediate kindred, and yet make no response or acknowledgment whatever of letters received. And yet the whole truth in this direction would not be stated if the author failed to say, that among the best contributors of facts to him have been, in a considerable number of instances, those who made no replies to his inquiries, until after a year or even two years of delay, and as the result almost always of renewed inquiries, after so long an interval. So slowly did their hearts warm with the sense of the duty and pleasure, of aiding in the preparation for their posterity of a worthy memorial of their fathers.

No person can be largely conversant with the facts of any family-history without being profoundly impressed, as in no other way, with the shortness and swiftness of human life, and so with the exceeding mutability of all earthly conditions of action, and of all our varied relationships to others. Nor can he fail to feel, unless he is the victim of the most stolid indifference to the moral lessons of life, how immeasurably superior are a right and true character, and a worthy life, to all riches, honors and offices without them.

American genealogies, instead of promoting, as some hastily claim that they do, the birth and growth of aristocratic conceit, tend powerfully, on the contrary, in the author's view, to secure to posterity all the more certainly the benefits of that true Christian republicanism, which we have received from the God of the Bible and of our fathers. The equal rights here enjoyed by all, and the equal facilities offered to all to improve their characters and their fortunes manifest clearly in every thoroughly prepared family history, how much superior is universal liberty, of a true Christian type, to all systems of kingly or priestly monopoly, however softened by the progress of humane ideas.

In reference to the earlier genealogies of the Northampton descendants of Elder John Strong, the author had the benefit of free access to the papers of the late Sylvester Judd, Esq., of Northampton, accorded kindly to him by his daughter, Miss Peninah Judd, of that place; and from them he obtained many valuable dates and facts; as also from two brief manuscript volumes containing dates of births, marriages and deaths prepared by Dr. Stebbins, of Northampton, belonging to Mrs. Thomas Bridgeman, of that place, which she generously allowed him to keep for months in his own hands.

A large proportion of his most valued helpers have been between 70 and 80 years of age, and some of them between 80 and 90. A considerable number, and not always among the aged, have passed away from earth, during the brief period of his genealogical labors, to join the host of God's great family above. To any of the generous contributors of needed data, whose names are here unintentionally overlooked, of which he fears that there may be many, he gives the same thanks as to those whose names are recorded.

In no kind of toil is it more easy to shirk proper effort, than in the pursuit of genealogical inquiries and nowhere is right and persevering labor more certain to be rewarded with success. Our fathers had a just presentiment of the worth to their posterity of the early records of their history, as the first settlers of this new and glorious land, and far out-shone, in such a way, the regard evinced by most of their descendants for them. It is almost always safe to assume that any desired records of names and dates, pertaining to the better families of the land, in early New England days, are in existence somewhere still ; and that by a little Yankee ingenuity and effort, their hiding place can be found.

The author expects to find, like other genealogists, many poor complaining souls hopping around his footsteps in the end, that would themselves give him no aid in his arduous undertaking, and are angry that he has not detailed such other facts, beyond those here furnished, as they alone, while wantonly or negligently omitting to do so, could have contributed. There are plenty of such frog-like natures to be found, in every field of human research, but especially in this field, that sit idly in the muddy pools of their own selfishness, waiting all day long for a good chance to fill the air with their croakings.

He is not certain but that even professed genealogists themselves will attack him, for his special ideas of genealogical methodology. He has not followed the old red-tape system, prescribed, in practice, by former genealogists and, even in set form, by the two genealogical societies at Boston and New York, of classifying generations, as such, together in parallel lines of presentation. Such a style of arrangement throws so much labor upon the reader, and requires him to carry so much in his mind from page to page, as he searches into one part after another of his own family history, that most soon give up the task of obtaining any large connected view of even their own personal lineage, in utter wearisomeness if not disgust. Families do not grow in horizontal directions but in descending and pendulous groups. To recommend, and, much more, to undertake to prescribe, a system of horizontal sections in genealogical anatomy, is as unnatural, as to treat in a similar way the facts and principles of vegetable or animal anatomy. " Following nature is the course of man," not only, but also of all true art, whether genealogical or of any other kind. An attempted establishment therefore of an unnatural mode of classification in genealogical matters will stand related to true art here, in no better light than the old Egyptian system of priestly dictation in the art of painting, and the modern Chinese system of drawing, without any reference to the laws of perspective, possess in respect to the arts of design.

Last of all : — a word about orthographic errors, verbal omissions and misprints. The most distasteful page in a book is to an author's eye that hated list of errata, which like a spirit of evil is sure to haunt him at the end of his long and careful work. " Offenses must needs come" here as elsewhere. Who ever built a mansion that had no cracks in its walls or had a garden that needed no weeding, or produced a work of art, in which he did not himself see many points of unreached aspiration. There are perhaps as few mistakes in this book as could be fairly expected, where there is in every direction such abundant danger of making them. The errors which have been discovered seem far more offensive to the author than they can seem to any one else, and look as ugly to him as would rents in a wedding coat. Any one familiar with an author's critical tastes and instincts will best realize how immensely trying to him was the all but imperative demand of the publisher, on account of their mutual distance from each other, that the book should be printed page by page without waiting for him to see and correct the revised proof. Add to this fact the further one that from 20 to 25 pages of proof were daily sent for correction to him, and such pages, so crowded with names and dates, abbreviations and figures, and punctuation-points, all to be carefully scrutinized and to be once for all rejected or approved item by item, with no other chance on his part to see how far his own corrections were actually made in the text than that of any other reader except at an earlier date; and it will be readily seen that it was through a slow length of agony that this book came at last to its birth. Through this great and unwelcome, because so inadequate, way of proving the right printing of his carefully prepared manuscript, he had literally to gallop each day between mails; a definite allotted space of just three hours. That second look at things which anything worthy of respect or regard should have, as is implied in the words themselves, that look, calm, close and critical, made for the very purpose of discovering errors and defects which like another winnowing of the chaff from the wheat removes it all away, must be foregone in the publication of this work however painful the fact or process of yielding up that last reserved right of an author. While thinking the book to have been printed with remarkably few errors, considering the facts of the case, the author yet feels that so much explanation as is here given of whatever mistakes or misprints may be discove in the work by any one, is due to himself.

May this history of one of the largest and best families in the prove to be a pillar of light, wherever it stands, to the honor of God God of our fathers, and for the promotion of virtue and piety, to the generation of those who shall read in its pages the record of the worthy lives and characters of their sires.

I.

Graduates of various Colleges.

[It will be seen that Yale College has attracted to itself the sympathies of the family in all its branches more by far than any other college in the land. It has been in all its generations from the first a great religious family, and its members have been chiefly connected with Congregational and Presbyterian churches. The spirit of freedom and of progress abounding in those churches has greatly suited their taste.]

[The foregoing account of the military history of the family must not be accepted by any one as furnishing anything more than a partial view of the real facts of the case.]

NOTE TO THE READER.

It is the plan of this book to give to each individual, whether belonging to the family by blood or marriage, his respective individual number in the total enumeration. The synopsis of any family record will exhibit, therefore, at a glance, who have been married and who have been single; and whether the marriages have been one, two or more in any instance. The references forwards and backwards, necessary to carry out thoroughly such a plan, are so many and often so far reaching in their range, that some mistakes have almost unavoidably occurred. The general system has however been carried out in the great mass of cases effectually. In numbering the more than 28 regiments of the family, some numbers have been inadvertently jumped and some repeated; so that, as is believed, they will balance each other.

The dates given prior to 1752, are meant to be given always in old style. In many family records the dates have been found to be carelessly mixed up in this respect — some of them having been left untouched and some altered to the new mode of reckoning.

NOTICE.

Any persons who can contribute additional information, and especially respecting any families of Strongs not represented in these volumes, are requested to do so as early and as fully as possible, that it may be published when of sufficient amount in a supplementary volume. In such a volume also any mistakes of importance discovered in this work, can be readily rectified. Direct to the author at Clinton, Oneida Co., New York.

HISTORY

DESCENDANTS OF ELDER JOHN STRONG,

OF NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

INTRODUCTION.

Few earthly toils are more absolutely entitled to be called "labors of love," than those spent in extended and thorough genealogical research. While furnishing neither money nor fame, they are yet full of satisfaction, and the more so the wider the field through which they are pursued.

If any part of the world's history hitherto deserves to be cherished in grateful and admiring remembrance, it is that of this country from its first settlement to the present hour; and the men, that wrought under God all the great benefits which we now enjoy into their present shape, deserve, for the moral purity of their characters, the heroism of their lives, and the greatness of the social results achieved for this nation and for all mankind by their industry and their virtue, to be embalmed forever in the hearts of their descendants. Whatever may occur in future years to change greatly the elements or courses of our development as a people, the fact can never be impaired, that the real builders of this nation, and the inspirers of its aims and purposes, were the Puritans of New England and their immediate descendants. Who and what they were in their every day life; how they spread from point to point over this wide land, first conquered by themselves to Christian civilization, penetrating every part of it with the ideas and institutions of their early homes; and how, from the precious seed which they bore forth and scattered, and often with much weeping, in the waste parts of the wilderness before them, the glorious harvest of our times has grown up for us, it is pleasant to find for one's self, and to be able to show unto others. The processes of the early settlement of this country, and of the wide-spread development of the active principles of home colonization, which have made out of a few religious strangers here at the first, one of the mightiest nations of the world in so short a time, are among the greatest marvels of human history.

The Puritan element, whose influence has been so all-conquering and beneficent among the social forces that have made us what we are as a people, is becoming manifestly every year a more and more diminishing quantity among the agencies at work to perpetuate and enlarge our greatness among the nations of the earth. How carefully, therefore, should we secure the memorials, while we may, of the long procession of true-hearted men and women that have borne down, with many tears and toils and prayers, the precious ark of God's covenant and of our liberties to the present hour. We will not, we cannot, forget those who toiled and dared and endured so much for God and for us. To enjoy the splendid heritage of good which they so laboriously and lovingly prepared for us, as if that were all that we of this day cared for, and to forget them as the magnanimous bestowers of its rich benefits upon us, would be the strongest possible proof of our utter degeneracy from the noble historic stock to which we belong.

Our fathers were workers. They ate their own bread, and were almost all of them at the first honest and earnest tillers of the ground. Self-help was the universal law of life. Nothing, next to vice itself, was more odious to them than idleness. Ministers and people alike, husbands and wives, fathers, mothers, and children, all helped themselves and helped each other. Self-indulgence was no part of the original fabric of our constitution as a people. It is pleasant to convey the records of the lives and deeds of such a sturdy and God-fearing ancestry as ours, to those who shall succeed us, as among the most precious remembrances of all past times. These were they who used to pray regularly at their firesides, and in their sanctuaries, that "God would bless their children and children's children to the latest generation;" and in what a fullness of all good things has the blessing that they prayed for, been rained down upon us! The aroma of their many virtues, which is so fresh in our hearts, who live within the very precincts of their times, we would fain perpetuate, if possible, in the happy consciousness of all their posterity.

The disposition to preserve monumental records, of some sort, of illustrious worth, is so universal among men, as to deserve almost the name of a natural instinct in the human heart. All scholars know how the stern old Romans, men of iron hearts and hands, honored the sacras patrum imagines in the penetralia of their houses; how they brought them forth in honor on religious and festive occasions; how they wore their likenesses on their signet-rings; and how they continually threw in their oratory and their verse the spell over the living present of the dead past, which their sires had glorified by their heroic lives. As the Germans love and praise their "dear father-land," so spoke they always proudly of Rome, as their fondly cherished patria, the land of their patres, or fathers. Even God himself appealed expectantly to the natural sentiment of reverence for worthy ancestors in the hearts of his people, as one of the strongest of all bonds for holding their hearts firmly to him. He spoke to them as "the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob," and "the God of their fathers." Of Abraham they always thought and spoke as "the father of the faithful" both on earth and in heaven; and heaven itself was in their thoughts "Abraham's bosom." Quite as much by historic memorials of various kinds, as also by remarkable prophetic symbols of great good things to come in the long future, was the Jewish mind purposely vitalized by its Maker with the energetic ideas and impulses, by which it was continually swayed. Even the moral law was prefaced with the ever-to-be repeated remembrance by them, that it came from him who had brought their fathers "out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." If Jews and Greeks and Romans and the populous swarms of China have found in ancestral ties one of the strongest bonds of civil order and security, how much more ought we, who enjoy the greatly superior benefits of Christian civilization, to value the remembrance of the earthly sources from which they have been immediately derived?

Shall then mineralogists like Dana, one of us, be commended for spending years of laborious exploration among corals and minerals; or distinguished botanists, for searching everywhere far and near for long periods of time for plants and trees and flowers that have escaped others' notice; or naturalists like Agassiz, for devoting a life-time to the study of the forms and habits of fishes, and even of the differences of their scales; or practical astronomers, for watching the skies by night from youth to old age to make observations, which need much repeating and comparing and studying afterwards to yield any result, and that often of but little actual value even for ideal uses; and yet he who gives a few happy years of earnest inquiry into the origin, progress and issues of the lives of those, for whom all plants and rocks and hills and seas and skies and stars were made, and especially in respect to a race the most conspicuous of all that have yet appeared upon earth for its high moral characteristics and experiences be asked with a leer, or rather with a sneer, "To what purpose is this waste?"

The Strong Family has been one of the largest and best of the original families of New England. In its widely ramified history we have a picture, on a broad scale, of men founding families in the fear of God, and training them to his service from generation to generation, according to the best typical forms in church and state of our ever expanding home-growth. They have ever been among the foremost in the land, to found and to favor those great bulwarks of our civilization, the church and the school. Many have been the towns, the territories and the states into whose initial forms and processes of establishment they have poured the full currents of their life and strength. Few families have had more educated and professional men among them, scholars, physicians, lawyers, teachers, preachers, judges, senators and military officers.

To the careful student of social forces and results, the family history here presented will plainly exhibit such facts as these: that families continue to bear, as such, definite physical and mental characteristics from generation to generation; that they are maintained and improved in their quality by thorough education, and that they inevitably degenerate without it; that hardships bravely met in one generation exalt the privileges and characteristics of those succeeding; and that the physical and social surroundings of a family exert a long and strong influence upon its whole future history. It makes generally quite as great a difference in the style of growth that a family exhibits, and often through long periods of time, where and how it is placed for its natural manifestation of itself, as where a delicate plant is set, whether in much sunshine or in little, in weak soil or a strong one, and with or without exposure to sudden chills and storms. That "the universal Yankee nation" is a thoroughly thrifty race, adapting itself readily to all the turns of fortune and to every new chance of success, the Strong Family history shows as plainly as can be desired. The Strongs have been much addicted to bearing off New England ideas and institutions into new settlements. And it has been the ever repeated source of wonder to the author, that, with the very great educational disadvantages of pioneer life, so many families that have been severely subjected to them in their early development, have come in the end to the superior position to which they have attained.

Any one who shall try to trace out the genealogy of any large family in all its branches, over a period of two hundred and fifty years and at ever new centres of life and action, will find that it requires the same kind of determined energy, in order to succeed, as to build a railway across the continent. Slowly but steadily the pathway of success is to be tunnelled for years through long miles of solid rock. Genealogical engineering, if not legitimately a branch of civil engineering, is beset with quite as many difficulties as that in any of its larger forms of patient requisition. He who toils in this field of results must make up his mind, however reluctantly, to gather such facts as he can, instead of what he would. The great vis inertiæ of the human mind at large, towards all the ends of life, which are not physical or measurable by physical standards, is the one perpetual obstacle to the absolute completeness of his work. Want of thankfulness to former generations, and want of generosity towards those which are to come, are the two phases of equal moral obliquity which supreme devotion to the passing interests of the hour everywhere assumes.

Few compared with the whole number of one's correspondents, but many when compared with none at all, take no interest whatever, or at least seem to take none, in the story of their lineage, and take pains at times to parade the fact rather ostentatiously, before your eyes. Although their intelligent, industrious, godly forefathers in successive generations prepared for them, with growing zeal, such a heritage of popular rights and privileges and of personal good in many forms, as none else on earth ever received from those that went before them, they grudge the bestowment of any time or thought, and especially of any money, upon the perpetuation of their memory. Quite a number remit you graciously to every other helper than themselves, who could help you most of all, if they would, and bid you go rejoicing on your way. Those who are most awake to the high historical and national value of thorough research into the history of the founders of this best of all countries, and are keenly appreciative of another's generous interest in a full development of their own personal lineage, yet need themselves a great deal of patient repetitious guidance, in the work of successfully mining into the long-neglected deeply-hidden facts of their family history.

Family records the author found almost uniformly in very great disorder, and exceedingly meagre, at the best, in respect to the ground that they professed to cover. Few knew anything of their ancestry back of their grandparents. That anterior space was sometimes found filled with curious theories and traditions. In one instance, a scholarly man had traced out satisfactorily to himself the genealogy of his grandfather and grandmother respectively, and he was shown in each case to be entirely wrong; one large family had the tradition, that their first American ancestor came to this country from England only three generations ago, while they were all the while the lineal descendants of Elder John Strong. Another branch had the idea that two brothers Strong came hither from the old country together, and that they were descended from the younger one of them, and knew nothing of the Northampton progenitor of themselves and of nearly all the Strongs in the land. In still another instance, another large family of the name had lost, as they supposed, one connecting link, but in reality two or three, in their line of descent, and were swinging painfully to their own consciousness in vast uncertainty, not knowing where to hang or where to fall in their genealogical ideas of themselves. It has been very pleasant to scatter light into many previously dark places, and to introduce those near of kin to each other in large numbers, for the first time.

One of the noblest of all ties, and one of the mightiest for holding together the fabric of society, is the love of kindred. Next to the love of God it is the strongest of all those social forces which serve to bind communities, large and small, into one grand universal brotherhood. Few ways of benefiting this young nation, so full still of inexperience and waywardness of feeling in many directions, with lasting good are equal to such as shall interest them broadly and permanently in those whom God has purposely united into distinct families, in order to exalt thereby individual virtues into family excellence, and to condense and solidify this into all the forms of social virtue. The family is of direct divine institution, and along its lines of living energy God's covenant blessings to mankind have ever flowed, throughout all the borders of the church and of the state. Genealogical societies, therefore, and genealogists themselves, although as yet so little appreciated in reference to the true purpose and influenee of their labors, are among the greatest benefactors of the nation and the age.

Reverenee for the past, for all that has been true and good and great in it, is one of the highest private and public virtues. Never was its strong influenee more needful, in the eomposition and action of the ruling elements of American soeiety, than now. A true spirit of national progress will not seek to displace a single right result or idea of other days, but rather to build on whatsoever has been desirable in the past all things better that are possible. The eonservative and progressive elements of the soeial state are equally neeessary eaeh to the other. Men of experienee and wisdom ought to rule this country, instead of those whose chief merit is their "young blood." What is significantly called "Young Ameriea" is quite ready to run away in its eoneeit and wantonness, not only with our pulpits but also with all our institutions and proeesses of edueation.

In the preparation of this work, the aim has been at all times, not to see how little eould be furnished of the real history of any family and eall the labor done; but how mueh, at whatever eost of time or money. In the matter of dates, it is provokingly difficult to be always aeeurate. Many give dates, and quite too confidently, from memory; some write so poorly, that 4 and 6, 3 and 5, 3 and 8, 7 and 9 are eontinually liable to be mistaken one for the other. It is seldom that two members of the same family give an extended list of dates exaetly alike, and the same individual gives often, at different times, very different dates of the same events. The personal peculiarities of the various eontributors of faets make themselves felt here, in many forms and ways.

To any careful observer of the faets here brought to view, many points of interest of a biologieal and soeiologieal kind will suggest themselves. It will be seen, that hereditary peculiarities descend from generation to generation and often to a long distance, and that covenant blessings are spread abundantly by Him who promises to bestow them over wide areas of spaee and time. Any who have been half afraid that there was some truth after all, in the mean fling, so often made by some, that ministers' sons and deacons' ehildren are more apt than others, to reaet against the well-meant but mistaken restraints of their early home edueation, will be able to pereeive here, on a large scale, the utter groundlessness of sueh a petulant and pestilent calumny. Far fewer representatives of the family-stoek, it will be readily seen, are born in modern than in by-gone times. The females of the family are, as a general faet much shorter lived than those of an earlier date, and, as a eonsequenee, the number of seeond and third marriages is quite in advanee in later years, of what it was in several of the first suecessive generations of Elder John Strong's deseendants. One of the most noticeable points of differenee between the present and the past, is the immense diversification of business seen everywhere now, both public and private, compared with the almost universal uniformity of employment at first, in tilling the soil. Every variety of taste, capacity, education, and strength can find employment in these days adapted to its wants, whether natural or artificial.

Those who left the ease and quiet of their early homes behind them, and bravely met the hardships incident to all new settlements, and especially in former days, will be seen, as a general rule, to have reaped larger and better results from their mingled toil and endurance, than those who shrank from such efforts to improve their circumstances. Among the many partialities of history, and its long passages of silence over much unrecorded worth, stand conspicuous the many tales of manly and womanly toil and endurance — the multiplied experiences of want and woe, of sickness and sorrow, meekly and smilingly met and conquered by our progenitors over all the land, that once might have been told to wondering ears, but now must be forgotten on earth forever. Those who bought large tracts of land, when land was cheap, and put themselves the stamp upon their broad acres of their own hardy enterprise, will be seen by those who observe the connections and sequences of things, to have founded families in large numbers which are now among the foremost in the land.

The special homes of the family, its centres of largest growth and strength, have been Windsor, Northampton, Coventry, Lebanon, Woodbury, Colchester, Durham, and Chatham — all but Northampton in Connecticut — and in New York, Setauket, L. I., Blooming Grove in Orange Co., Durham and Windham in Greene Co., Lansing in Tompkins Co., N. Y., and Huntsburgh, O.

The great mass of the Strongs for numbers — two-thirds nearly of all that the author has been able to trace — have been the descendants of three out of sixteen of the eighteen children of Elder John Strong, that lived to establish families of their own, Thomas, Jedediah, and Ebenezer Strong.

Among the most frequent names to be found among the Strongs — next to John, William, and Henry, those universal favorites — are the scriptural names, Joseph, Elijah, Samuel, Nathan, David, Jonathan and Daniel, and especially Benajah, Phinehas, Selah and Salmon. The more odd and uncouth any name was the more likely was it, when once worn by an honored bearer of it, to be perpetuated from one generation to another.

Our fathers were no less fond of nicknames for their offspring then are their modern representatives; but, instead of calling them as we do, Nellie, Carrie, Lizzie, Minnie, Nettie, Charley, Willie, Harry, Frank, and Jenny, they used the less euphonious names of Betsey, Debby (Deborah), Ency (Experience), Nabby (Abigail), Nanny, Pammy (Pamelia), Patty, Peggy, Polly, Tempy, (Temperance), Molly, Billy, Jack.

The various modes of spelling the same Christian name which abound in the land the author has reduced in the records of this book to their one generally accepted form. To the disposition, so prevalent in these days, to make pet names, both masculine and feminine, end in ie, he has not yielded. Such names as Abby, Fanny, Sally and the like he cannot make up his mind to write Abbie, Fannie, and Sallie. Jenny and Jeanie (the French original of our English form of the name) appear with equal frequency in the book, but never Jennie. No one appellative has, it is believed, such a great variety of orthographic forms as Sibyl, which often occurs as Sybil, Sybbil, Sybbel, Sybbyl, Sybal, Siball, Sibel, Sibil, Sibball, Sibbil, and Sibble. That love of the grotesque, accordingly, which is so strong a characteristic of American humor, and in which most genealogists indulge themselves, in copying the records of other times, carefully repeating and preserving for the amusement or astonishment of all readers, the various misspellings that they find of the names of their forefathers, the author has not allowed to disfigure these pages. He might have sprinkled them plentifully with such hideous forms of our familiar Christian names, as these made by ignorant town-clerks and others; Lideah for Lydia; Looesah and Luezer for Louisa; Claricy for Clarissa; Elizibirth for Elizabeth; Febee for Phebe; Oleiza for Eliza; Margrit for Margaret: Phydelia for Fidelia; Unis for Eunice; or Elixander for Alexander; Elifelit for Eliphalet; Jeams for James; Orasha for Horatio; Phillop for Philip, &c., &c. So, some persons paint pictures; and the more mechanical they are in their ideas, the more they feel bound to present the faces of their ancestors with all the warts and moles and patches that they happen to see fastened in any way upon them.

Genealogies are almost universally so arranged, as to give so much difficulty to the reader in tracing out his own immediate relatives, that he shrinks from the needful effort in any but a limited way; and he soon puts his family history upon the shelf, and treats it only as a kind of gazetteer for occasional and brief consultation on mere points of specific interest. Those belonging to a given generation are all presented together in one view; the antecedent and sequent connections of any individual family must be carefully and repetitiously sought for, one by one; and this as if for the first time on every new occasion when the desire to examine one's lines of family relationship arises in the heart. In this book, on the contrary, the history of each branch of the family at large, and of every specific family belonging to it, is pursued from its beginning to its end, by itself, and each one's own particular kindred, whether near or far off, are presented together in one connected view. The reader does not need to make any investigations for himself, but may enjoy, at his leisure, the results of the author's researches in his behalf.

Should any ask, what are the pleasures of genealogical investigation? the answer is, that they are manifold. They are such as: the pleasure of Samuel Bartlett, all of Northampton (said Mary having been born July 5, 1652, and having married April 27, 1672, and died Aug., 1674), had come to her death by some unnatural means; and that divers testimonies reflected upon Mary Parsons, wife of Joseph Parsons, senior. She was "summoned to appear before the governor and magistrates, or court of assistants at Boston, or any court between this and May 13, 1674, or forfeit the sum of £50" — which sum was forfeited by her non-appearance. But at the meeting of the court on Jan. 5, 1674–5, her case was finally adjudicated; and she was formally absolved from all further costs or charges in the matter.

Of many great names can Northampton boast, and of none more than that celebrated triplet of distinguished men — grandfathers and grandsons in successive generations — Solomon Stoddard, Jonathan Edwards and Timothy Dwight. Of like renown with them for talent, in other fields of public service, were Col. John Stoddard, Major Joseph Hawley and Gov. Caleb Strong.

From Northampton went forth in early days various colonies that founded neighboring towns, as Easthampton in 1665, Southampton in 1732 and Westhampton in 1767. Steady and strong has been the outflow ever from its nourishing sources of individual excellence and enterprise into all parts of the land.

The author takes the more pleasure in presenting this condensed view of life at Northampton in days gone by, as many of the facts here stated have not been put before into print.

Additional facts of interest pertaining to the early history of Northampton may be found in Letter 34, vol. I, of Dwight's Travels in New England.

HISTORY OF JOHN STRONG.

That the Strongs of England, Ireland and Scotland are of a different origin respectively, would seem to be manifest from the variety of their family-crests. The crest of the Strongs of Ireland is a lion rampart, azure, supporting a pillar argent (or silver); of those of Scotland, a cluster of grapes stalked and leaved; while of those of England there is a threefold variety of crest. One of them is, out of a mural coronet, gold, a demi-eagle, wings displayed, gold; another is an eagle with two heads, wings expanded: the third form of crest is an eagle displayed, gold. An eagle with wings expanded characterizes them all alike. Which of the three forms of crest belongs to the Strongs of this country, the author has no means of determining. Persons consulting books of heraldic symbols seem to have selected, on the principle of choosing the best, the first of the three English crests described as that of the American branch of the family. No one of whom the author has heard has in his possession any silver tankard, or other family relic, on which the real ensigns armorial of the family are engraved. If the crest with a mural coronet belongs to us the explanation of it will perhaps be worth the having, that such a coronet was anciently given to the man, who first scaled the walls of an enemy's city or entered by a breach. The rim of such a coronet was made to resemble battlements.

If there is any motto belonging to the ensigns armorial of the Strongs, the author knows not what it is. It was early represented to him by some members of the family, that there was a motto handed down to us by our ancestors, for the ever new inspiration of manly virtue in our hearts; and a grand motto it was for the practical wisdom that it conveys: Tentanda est via! they said that it was; and it is surely good enough to be written in letters of gold over the portals of any human pathway leading onwards and upwards. It has in it the sap and strength of a dozen or more of our best proverbs, such as "Try again:" "Nothing venture nothing have:" "First be sure you are right, then go ahead:" "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing in the best manner possible:" "Practice makes perfect:" "Don't give up the ship:" "Faint heart never won fair lady:" "Perseverance conquers all things:" "Work and wait:" "Do or die:" "Real success is worth all that it costs." The author has put this motto fully to the proof in the preparation of this work; and he recommends it to all, young and old, as invaluable in the work of life, in the pursuit of whatever good one may wish to obtain. He is sorry to be compelled to drop it mented his gross misconduct towards him — was town-clerk at that time, and kept no account whatever of the different acts and aspects of the controversy with Edwards. The genealogist will often find occasion to blame Hawley for neglecting to record great numbers of dates, which now would be much valued if they could be obtained.

Early in their history they had sumptuary laws. In 1651 the law was passed by the General court that "persons, whose estates are less than £200, shall not wear gold or silver lace, gold or silver buttons, bone lace above 2*s.* per yard, silk hoods or scarfs, upon penalty of 10*s.* for each offense." Those who wore ribbons, great boots (leather being scarce), points at the knees, might be taxed at a £200 estate. "The law did not extend to any magistrate, or public officer, their wives and children, nor to military officers or soldiers in service, nor to those whose education and employment have been above the ordinary degree, nor to those who have had considerable estate, though now decayed." The account book of one of the leading storekeepers at Northampton for some years before and after 1760 shows the manners of the times. "His most common business was selling nails and other things for buildings; buttons, lining, twist silk, etc., for garments." The sale of trimmings for garments was very extensive. All families had buttons, silk, mohair and some lining, and most had in addition buckram, tape and wadding, with expensive linings of shalloon. Baize was much used about garments, for linings. The great business of the country-trader was selling trimmings, rather than the woolen cloth for their garments. The gowns of females were not so important as other things that they wore, being manufactured at home. They had many trimmings and aprons, scarfs, hoods, stays, and articles about the neck. There were no bonnets worn then, and the traders sold nothing belonging to the head, and very little for the feet. Some had fur hats from the hatter; others, hoods, coifs, etc.; they knit most of their own stockings. Most of the common garments of the men were made of cloth manufactured at home, coarse but substantial.

Smoking was very common as early as 1700 and the farmers of that region seem to have raised their own tobacco, then as now; and that they were held to sufficiently strict rules in any public use of it, is apparent from the fact that on June 29, 1649, Hugh Parsons was fined at Springfield 10*s.* "for taking tobacco in the open street" (not a bad law the ladies will say to have and enforce in our day); and on May 30, 1649, James Bridgman was fined there, "for taking tobacco in his yard."

Some of the darker features of those early ancestral days are presented in the following picture of the times: Mrs. Mary (Bliss) Parsons, wife of Joseph Parsons, senior, of Northampton was accused of witchcraft in Sept., 1674. Being called to speak for herself, "she did assert her own innocency, often mentioning it, how clear she was of such a crime, and that the righteous God knew her innocency; with whom she had left her cause." The charge was, that Mary, the daughter of James Bridgman and wife of one white person. A guard of fifty soldiers was maintained in Northampton in 1675, by day and night, throughout the year. In 1677 the meeting house was protected by a palisade, as in 1690 was in fact the whole town. An oaken door filled with spikes, marked 1703, was shown for many years, as a curiosity in the town. What a picture of trials is presented to view in the following account, found on records at Northampton, under date of May 13, 1704; "John Taylor, Samuel Janes, his wife and 3 children, Benoni Janes and 2 children, John Searle and 3 children, Dea. Benjamin Janes and 4 children, Moses Hutchinson and child, and Patience Webb (21) were killed by Indians at Pascomac (a part of the town). Deerfield was destroyed the same year by them; and five of John Stebbins' grandchildren were captured and never returned." In 1746 a watch house was built in every little neighborhood; or some given dwelling house was fortified, so as to be a place of refuge in the event of any sudden danger. Mrs. Phebe (Lyman) Strong (mother of Gov. Caleb Strong), who was born Aug. 20, 1717, used to say, that one day when a child she was on her way to the block-house with a playmate, towards night-fall, and that, as they stepped aside to gather flowers, an Indian rushed suddenly out of some bushes near by, and seizing her companion, bore her off, and that she was never seen again by her friends.

They had for a long period no streets or roads, but only paths from house to house. For a hundred years or more after the first settlement of the town, it was a week's journey for man and horse to go to Boston; and the path was distinguishable by marks cut upon the trees through the long stretch of forest that lay between the two places.

From a journal kept by Major Timothy Dwight of Northampton (father of Pres. Dwight of Yale) it appears that in 1750 prices of staple articles ranged as follows: Mutton per ℔. 2 cents; beef 2⅔ cents; butter 6 cents; and flour 1¾ cents, or $3.50 per bbl. Wild animals abounded; peltry was cheap, and furs that now cost fifty or a hundred dollars cost then but a few shillings. It is recorded of Capt. Aaron Cook that he killed twenty-seven wolves in three years, or, one every six weeks during that time.

Our Northampton fathers lived in a simple democracy. A very few only were distinguished by any civil titles. Ministers, school-teachers, Justice Joseph Parsons and Lt. Wm. Clark had the honorable title of Mr. In military offices and titles they specially rejoiced. They were the Lord's soldiers in feeling, defenders of "the faith once delivered unto the saints," members of the church militant on earth; and in making for themselves a new home on these wild shores they found for many years that the sword could no more be dropped out of hand than the hoe. In 1712, the town voted to support a grammar school, which has been ever since maintained.

For any account of the difficulties of Pres. Edwards' day, the explorer of the Northampton records will search in vain. Major Joseph Hawley, his cousin and most violent opponent — who afterwards most bitterly la-

BRIEF SKETCH OF THE EARLY HISTORY OF NORTHAMPTON.

Northampton has ever been the chief home of the Strong family, which, under its own and other names (Baker, Clapp, Clark, Kingsley, Lyman, etc.), is largely represented there still. A brief sketch of the early history of that place will aid any, not previously acquainted with it, to look more understandingly into the every-day experiences of those who first took possession of it in the name of God, for themselves and their posterity.

The settlement of Northampton (called by the Indians Nonotuck or Nohwottuge) was begun October 29, 1654, by some twenty persons, who came from Springfield, Mass., for the purpose. Its present name is supposed to have been given to it by John King, one of its first settlers, who had come from Northampton, England, or if not by him, by the others as a matter of respect for him. They bought nine miles square of the Indians by permission of the General court for one hundred fathoms of wampum, a few presents to the Indians, one of which was a woman, and the ploughing of sixteen acres of corn. The deed was made to one person, Col. John Pynchon of Springfield.

They went thither as they stated for the public weal (being straitened as they felt for want of room at Springfield), "to raise corn and cattle, to live, and to attend upon God in his holy ordinances without distraction." All the early settlers were accordingly keepers of flocks, and tillers of the earth. The arts that were in special favor for a long time, because so specially needful, were those of carpentry, coopering, blacksmithing, tanning, shoemaking and weaving. No organized public action was had until 1658, when the first town-meeting was held, and on June 7 of that year, Rev. Eleazar Mather of Dorchester was "desired to be a minister unto them, in the way of trial in dispensing his gifts." He came with others from Windsor and Hartford; and in June, 1661, was formally ordained pastor of the first church. Of that church John Strong, who removed to Northampton in 1659, from Windsor, Ct., was one of the chief founders, and he was also long afterwards a pillar in it.

A meeting-house forty-two feet square was ordered in 1661 to be con-[illegible]d, which seventy-six years afterwards fell in with a terrible crash [illegible] 13, 1737), during the Sabbath morning service, injuring many, [illegible]ling none.

thorough exploration for facts desired; of ever new varieties of inve effort for success; of continual victory in diversified and protracted deavors; of benevolent purposes long cherished, and executed with la loving zeal, in behalf of great numbers of the living and of those v shall succeed them over all the land; of a deeply gratified sense of justi in both feeling and action, towards a long array of the worthy dead; true patriotic sentiment indulged in no cheap momentary way, and of re service rendered to the state in the form of wide-spread and deeply per vasive influence for good. Our real pleasures are of our own originatio under God; and what of them are equal to those of an intellect and heart fully awake to the demands of wide-spread and permanent plans o usefulness to others.

All honor to the brave men and women who dared the toils and perils of the first settlement of this country, and of its progressive colonizatio and improvement! A noble race were they, the flower of the world' whole vast population up to their day! They were none too quick in their action, and none too earnest in their efforts, in preparing this broad bright land of ours, furnished fresh to their hand by its Maker, for the reception of the huge influx of emigrants from all parts of the world, and of such far lower moral qualities than themselves. The moulds of the pioneer forms of social life, which our fathers established, have had surely no longer time than they needed, to become ready for the strai to which they have been already so severely put. That the Strongs hav done their part, and done it well, in preparing the past foundations o American society for the intensified activities of our present life, in a civil, military, educational, and religious ways, will be quite manifest t any who attentively read their history.

A thorough investigator into the characteristics and fortunes of a larg and noble family like this, rises from his work at its close with the spon taneous exclamation: Blessed are the founders of good families, and es- pecially the faithful Christian mothers who guide their households through long years of genial, skilful, prayerful effort, in the ways of piety and peace! The happy quiet workers of the world who adorn both the stat and the church with the beauty of their own well-ordered lives, as they ply industriously, with abounding faith in God, the golden arts of peac are infinitely superior in themselves, and in the results which they achiev to all the noisy heralds and heroes of any false ideas of life or of its val to its possessor or others.

Any one who will visit the rural districts of New England now, aw from rail roads and factories, will find there the same industrious, thoughtful, single minded, straight-forward, religious sort of m women, that settled this country two centuries ago and more, and stamped it by their ideas, habits, and enterprise as the best land t sun ever shone upon — the seed-wheat of both the church and the

Dec. 10, 1660, his home-lot and lands in Windsor with Edward Elmer, in Northampton. He died there Nov. 28, 1676.

He had 4 daughters, if not more, and what sons if any does not appear. His daughters were: 1. Joanna who married Nov. 6, 1633, Capt. Roger Clapp of Dorchester. 2. Abigail, wife of Elder John Strong. 3. Hepzibah, who married Richard Lyman of Northampton — the progenitor of the many Lyman families of the land. The three families Strongs, Clapps, and Lymans — half brothers to each other from the start — have wonderfully intermarried one with the other. The history of the Strongs here presented is very largely also a history of the Lymans. A proper history of the Ford Family in this country would include in it likewise all of the large families of Strongs, Lymans and Clapps. 4. Another daughter of Thomas Ford — name unknown — married as his second wife Major Aaron Cook also of Northampton. He was at Windsor in 1640 and at Northampton in 1661 where he was chosen representative to the General court, as afterwards at Hadley, whither he subsequently removed. He was a man of great energy and a devoted friend to the regicides, Goffe and Whalley.

The inventory of Thomas Ford, made Jan. 4, 1676–7, is as follows: "Elder John Strong, Preserved Clapp and goodwife Marsh, the administrators.

1. Inventory, ...	£195	17*s.* 9*d.*
2. Estate in Elder John Strong's hands, ..	£ 99	15*s.* 1*d.*
3. Capt. Aaron Cook owed him £50.: Zerubbabel Filer owed him £20, and Jedediah Strong, £4.	£ 74.
	£369	12*s.* 10*d.*"]

There are now (1871) seven generations of the family living on the stage of action together, from William Augustus Strong, Esq., of Joliet, Ill., b. May 3, 1800 (son of Bela Strong, Jr., of Northampton, Mass., and Sarah Parsons) in the fifth generation— his father Bela Strong, Jr., having been the son of Bela Strong and Eunice Alvord and grandson of Jerijah Strong the youngest son of Elder John Strong, all of Northampton — to Genevieve Sprigg Ludlow in the eleventh generation, b. July 27, 1868, dau. of Col. Wm. Ludlow (son of Gen. Wm. H. Ludlow of New York), and Frances L. Nicoll, dau. of Wm. Nicoll of Islip, L. I., son of Wm. Nicoll also of Islip, son of Capt. Wm. Nicoll, who was the son of Wm. Nicoll and Johanna D'Honneur, dau. of Capt. Sam'l D'Honneur and Rachel Strong, dau. of Selah Strong of Setauket, L. I., grandson of Elder John Strong.

tions of his office, as described in the following church record under date of Sept. 11, 1672: "Solomon Stoddard was ordained pastor of the church in Northampton by Mr. John Strong, ruling elder, and Mr. John Whiting, pastor of the second church in Hartford."

His first wife, whose name and family the author has not been able to ascertain, he married in England. She died on the passage or soon after landing; and in about two months afterwards her infant offspring, a second child, died also. He married in December, 1630, for a second wife, Abigail Ford of Dorchester, Mass., with whom he lived in wedlock for fifty-eight years. She died, the mother of 16 children, July 6, 1688, aged about 80; he died April 14, 1699, aged 94. He had had, up to the time of his decease, 160 descendants, viz: eighteen children, fifteen of whom had families; one hundred and fourteen grandchildren (6, John of Windsor; 16, Thomas of Northampton; 14, Jedediah; 7, Return; 10, Elder Ebenezer; 6, Abigail, Mrs. Chauncey; 12, Mrs. Joseph Parsons; 13, Mrs. Zerubbabel Filer; 8, Samuel; 11, Mary, Mrs. John Clark; 7, Hannah, Mrs. William Clark; 4, Hester, Mrs. Thomas Bissell); and thirty-three great grandchildren, at least.

He made over his lands in his life-time to his children, and took bills of those whom he had helped, beyond their share — as of Ebenezer, for land and rent £71 8*s.*, of Samuel, for do. £49 12*s.* and of Jerijah, for do. £60. He owed at his death, £61 11*s.*, chiefly to his son Ebenezer — to which add for funeral expenses 40*s.*, probate of will and inventory 7*s.* 6*d.*, and recording of same, 5*s.*, and he had a free estate of £140. He gave to seven daughters £40 each, with what they had previously received. Abigail had had £38 13*s.*; Elizabeth, £36 7*s.*; Sarah, £28 1*s.*; Hannah, £28 12*s.*; Hestar, £23 5*s.*; and Thankful £16 7*s.* He gave to Experience £5 and to Catharine Chauncey (dau. of Abigail) £10 and to Rachel Strong (widow of Thomas) one acre in Northampton long improved by her husband. His sons, Samuel and Jerijah, were the executors of his will.

[Thomas Ford, father of Mrs. Abigail Ford Strong, came to this country in the Mary and John (Capt. Squeb) with John Strong, and founded, with the rest of the company, the new Dorchester of the new world. "Great pains were taken," it is said in the History of Dorchester, "to construct this company of such materials as should compose a well ordered settlement, containing all the elements of an independent community. Several gentlemen past middle life, with adult families and good estates, were added: Henry Wolcott, Thomas Ford and four others (mentioned by name) were of this class." He was one of the early settlers of Windsor, Ct. He was deputy to the General court in 1637, '8 '9, and '40, and grand juror in 1643. His wife died in Windsor April 18, 1643, and he married for a 2d wife, Mrs. Ann Scott, widow of Thomas Scott. He removed to Northampton, and probably at the same time with John Strong in 1659. He exchanged, Eleanor Strong came with her brother John to this country, when he was but twenty-five years of age, and she was probably several years younger, and married Walter Deane, a tanner, of Taunton, Mass., previously of Taunton, Eng., and became the mother of four sons and one daughter. He was born about 1617, and was a prominent man in the affairs of his new home. Her deseendants have been numerous and highly respectable. For various accounts of some of them see N. E. Gen. Register, published at Boston in several volumes, in various places.

In 1635, after having assisted in founding and developing the town of Dorchester, John Strong removed to Hingham, Mass., and on March 9, 1636, took the freeman's oath at Boston. His stay at Hingham was short, as on Dec. 4, 1638, he is found to have been an inhabitant and proprietor of Taunton, Mass., and to have been made in that year a freeman of Plymouth Colony. He remained at Taunton, as late at any rate as 1645, as he was a deputy thence to the General court in Plymouth, in 1641, '3, and '4. From Taunton he removed to Windsor, Ct., where he was appointed with four others, Capt. John Mason, Roger Ludlow, Israel Stoughton, and Henry Wolcott, all very leading men in the infant colony, "to superintend and bring forward the settlement of that place," which had been settled a few years before (1636) by a portion of the same colony that with him had founded Dorchester. Windsor was in fact called at first, and for several years (1636–50), Dorchester.

In 1659 he removed from Windsor to Northampton, Mass., of which he was one of the first and most active founders, as he had been previously of Dorchester, Hingham, Taunton, and Windsor. In Northampton he lived for forty years, and was a leading man in the affairs of the town and of the church. He was a tanner and very prosperous in his business. His tannery was located on what is now the southwest corner of Market and Main streets near the rail road depot. He owned at different times, as appears by records in the county clerk's office, some two hundred acres of land in and around Northampton.

How he obtained his office and title as Elder John Strong will appear by the following quotation from the church records at Northampton: "After solemn and extraordinary seeking to God for his direction and blessing, the church chose John Strong ruling elder, and William Holton, deacon. They were ordained 13: 3 mo: '63" (or, the year beginning then in March, June 13, 1663, O. S., or N. S. June 24, 1663), "the elder by the imposition of the hands of the pastor" (Rev. Eleazar Mather) "and Mr. Russel of Hadley — the deacon, afterwards by the imposition of the hands of the pastor and elder. Mr. Russell, Mr. Goodwin, and brother Goodman were present from Hadley; Dea. Chapin and Mr. Holyoke from Springfield, who gave the right hand of fellowship to these delegates." How near to the minister himself, so greatly revered, the ruling elder stood in the thoughts of our Pilgrim fathers, is manifest from the funeas the family motto. It belongs to the Stronge Family of Lyman Abbey — a baronetcy created in the last century — whose crest is an eagle displayed with two heads, sable, beaked and legged, azure, langued, gules: motto, tentanda est via. This family may be connected in some way — as the resemblance of name and heraldic symbols would seem to suggest — with the Strong Family. If we cannot boast, as we would not if we could, of descent from the kings and nobles of other lands, we may well feel an honest pride in an ancestry whose wealth was wealth of character, and whose patent of nobility they obtained from above in following through storm and shine the footsteps of prophets and apostles and of the Son of God.

The Strong Family of England was originally located in the county of Shropshire. One of the family married an heiress of Griffith, of the county of Caernarvon, Wales, and went thither to reside in 1545. Richard Strong was of this branch of the family, and was born in the county of Caernarvon in 1561. In 1590 he removed to Taunton, Somersetshire, England, where he died in 1613, leaving a son John then eight years of age, and a daughter Eleanor. The name is stated in one record, on what authority the writer knows not, to have been originally McStrachan and to have gone through the following changes, McStrachan, Strachan, Strachn, Strong. John Strong was born in Taunton, Eng., in 1605, whence he removed to London and afterwards to Plymouth. Having strong Puritan sympathies he sailed from Plymouth for the new world, March 20, 1630, in company with 140 persons, and among them Rev. Messrs. John Warham and John Maverick and Messrs. John Mason and Roger Clapp, in the ship Mary and John (Capt. Squeb) and arrived at Nantasket, Mass. (Hull), about twelve miles southeast from Boston, after a passage of more than seventy days in length, on Sunday, May 30, 1630. The original destination of the vessel was Charles river; but an unfortunate misunderstanding which arose between the captain and the passengers, resulted in their being put summarily ashore by him at Nantasket. After searching for a few days, for a good place in which to settle and make homes for themselves, they decided upon the spot, which they called Dorchester, in memory of the endeared home in England which many of them had left, and especially of its revered pastor, Rev. John White, "the great patron of New England emigration," who had especially encouraged them to come hither.

The grandfather of Elder John Strong was, as tradition informs us, a Roman Catholic, and lived to a great age. The Strong Family has borne out remarkably, in its earlier generations in this country at any rate, the historical genuineness of its name, in its wide-spread characteristics of physical vigor and longevity, and the large size of very many of its numerous households. There are a few families of Strongs in the land, some half dozen only, so far as the author has been able to find — that are not descended from Elder John Strong. For a brief account of those that he has discovered of such a sort, see appendix.

Y., receiving the command immediately after the reereancy of Major Mordecai. He was next made chief of ordnance to Gen. McDowell, and distinguished himself by his great bravery at the battle of Bull Run. He was afterwards on the staff of Gen. McClellan until Sept. 1861, when he was made, by the request of Gen. Butler, the chief of his staff. After Gen. Butler had been relieved from the department of the Gulf, he volunteered, having been made himself Brig. Gen. of the U. S. A., of Vols., for his gallant services as a soldier, to go with Gen. Gilmore and make the assault upon Charleston. To his brigade were given the peril and the honor of leading the attack upon the batteries of Morris Island, on which he was the first one himself to land. His boots becoming filled with water he pulled them off and led the charge with only his stockings on his feet. Though the opposing batteries were powerful and their fire heavy they were gallantly carried. He was placed in command of the troops on Morris Island, and given charge of the column which was to assault Fort Wagner. In the assault he received a fatal wound but lived to reach his family in New York city where he died of lockjaw July 30, 1863, aged 30. He was made Major General by brevet for his great services, the appointment to date from the day of his wound and was the youngest such officer in the army. Cavalry and rose through successive offices to the captaincy of Co. K, in his regiment. He was with Gen. Fremont in the campaign of the Shenandoah Valley and was twice wounded; and with Sheridan on his raid into Richmond, two bullets passing through his clothes; and afterwards with Grant's army in their terrible onslaughts upon the enemy. He started from the Rapidan, Va., with 90 men in his company and after thirty-six days almost continuous fighting he fell, leaving but fifteen survivors on duty; and was gallantly rallying that little fragment of his company against overpowering numbers when a bullet struck him in the breast and passing through his body severed the vital cord that held him to earth. He wrote but a short time before his death to his friends at home: "If it is my lot to fall in battle, so let it be. I shall be content. I am determined to do my whole duty. I shall never be taken prisoner; I shall sell my life as dearly as possible." Y., and completed his studies at the Free Church Theol. Sem., in Edinburgh, Scotland. It was his fixed purpose to become in the end a missionary to Bulgaria, Turkey. But while pursuing his studies at Edinburgh he supplied the pulpit of the Congregational Church, in Musselburgh, and was so much blessed in his labors that he received numerous invitations to labor as an evangelist at the close of his course of study, and labored in such a way in Scotland for about a year. In the summer of 1861, he returned to this country on board the Great Eastern with two thousand and more British soldiers on their way to Quebec, and preached to them daily on the way. From that time until July 28, 1866, he labored almost incessantly — preaching once and twice a day continuously as an evangelist in different parts of the country. In "the Harvest Work of the Holy Spirit," by Rev. P. C. Headley, an extended account is given of his labors. In July, 1866, he went with his wife to Palestine — preaching, while on his way thither, on the continent through an interpreter many times, as also afterwards in the Holy Land. On his return homewards he preached for a year and a half in London, Glasgow, Dublin and many other places, during which time he wrote and published numerous books which had a large circulation. His attention has been much directed to efforts for the conversion of children, and thousands it is believed have been led by him on both sides of the Atlantic to consecrate themselves in their youth to their Master in Heaven. He was ordained a minister of the gospel Jan. 1863, by the Third Presbytery of New York. He m. May 24, 1866, Eliza Overton b. Feb. 28, 1838 (dau. of Edward Overton, Esq., lawyer, of Towanda, Pa., and Eliza Clymer granddaughter of George Clymer — one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence). He spends his summers at Vernon, Ct. To him the author is indebted for most of the account here furnished of the Strong-Hammond Family. He is the author of "Sketches of Palestine," "Jesus, The Way," "Little Ones in the Fold," "New Praises of Jesus," "Children and Jesus," "Jesus' Lambs," "Hymns of Salvation," "Jesus, the Lamb of God," &c.

[6th Gen.]

2507–8. ix. HON. ANSON JONES, M.D., b. Jan. 20, 1798, at Gr. Barrington, Mass., m. May 17, 1840, Mary McCrary née Smith b. in Arkansas, July 24, 1819 (dau. of John McCutcheon Smith b. in Va., and Sarah Relum b. in Tenn.), widow of Hugh Crary. He obtained his education by his own efforts. He was grad. at Jefferson Med. Coll., in Philadelphia, March, 1827, and in 1833 went to Texas and became a surgeon in the Texas army, and was in the battle of San Jacinto (April 21, 1836). After Texas became a republic he was sent as minister to the U. S. Govt. He was also representative and senator in the Congress of Texas, secretary of State and President of the Republic (Dec. 1844–Feb. 1846). During his administration the public finances were managed with great skill and economy; old debts were all paid off and a surplus laid by (beside meeting current expenses), sufficient to provide for all needful expenditures for some years to come. The frontiers were efficiently protected against Mexicans and Indians. Law was enforced and justice, civil and criminal, was maintained. No expeditions for glory or plunder occurred; immigration was large and active; the public lands were husbanded; common school education was promoted; and a state constitution was formed by a convention called for the purpose by President Jones, and made the fundamental law of the state by the subsequent annexation of Texas to the United States. He d. at Houston, Texas, Jan. 9, 1858. His widow still lives (1870) at Harrisburgh, Texas. He was a zealous mason and was one of five masons to organize the first masonic lodge in Texas. He was the first Grand Master of the lodge, for which a dispensation was procured from the Grand Lodge of Louisiana. From 1846 to 1858, he resided on his farm which he called Barrington, engaged in agriculture and the education of his children.

[7th Gen.] Children:

(son of Sir Henry) b. near Huntingdon, England, where the house having been twice rebuilt now stands, b. about the year 1560, m. in 1591, Elizabeth Steward dau. of William Steward of Ely and sister of Sir Robert Steward. She was descended from Robert Steward last popish prior and first Protestant dean of Ely, and from the Royal Family of Stuarts of Scotland. She was a widow when married to Robert Cromwell. They had 10 children, of whom 6 daughters and one son came to maturity. As for the sisters of Robert Cromwell, M.P., Elizabeth wife of William Hampden was the mother of the celebrated John Hampden who "the little Tyrant of his fields withstood," in refusing to pay 20 shillings illegal ship money to Charles I. Frances (Mrs. Whalley) was the mother of Col. Edward Whalley one of the judges of Charles I.

iv. Catharine Henrietta Cromwell (eldest sister of Oliver Cromwell, the Protector), dau. of Robert Cromwell, M. P., and Elizabeth Steward, was born at the family residence near Huntingdon on the Ouse, Feb. 7th, 1596–7. She m. Col. Whitstone, a parliamentary officer, and for second husband, Col. John Jones in 1623. She beside being first cousin to John Hampden and Edward Whalley was aunt by marriage to Gen. Goffe, and Col. Ireton.

v. William Jones (son of Col. John Jones and Catharine H. Cromwell, b. in 1624, came to the New Haven Colony in 1660. In 1671, he m. Hannah Eaton. He was Dep. Gov. of New Haven and Connecticut (colonies), for fifteen years (1683–1698). He d. in 1706.

vi. Isaac Jones (son of William Jones of New Haven and Hannah Eaton) b. in 1671, m. Nov. 25, 1692, Deborah Clark of Stratford, Ct. He d. at New Haven, in 1741.

vii. Isaac Jones, Jr. (son of Isaac and Deborah Jones of New Haven), b. about 1698, at New Haven, resided at North Bolton, Ct. He d. in 1782.

viii. Joel Jones (son of Isaac Jones, Jr., of North Bolton), b. about 1721, was a farmer at Wethersfield, Ct. He m. Hannah Brewer of Worcester, Mass. (dau. of Judge Josiah Brewer).

Their children were: 1. Phinehas b. in 1749. 2. Joel b. 1751–2. 3. Solomon b. about 1754. 4. Isaac b. Oct. 1756. 5. William b. June 15, 1759, d. in 1850, and 6. Lucy (Mrs. Hatch) b. in 1761, afterwards Mrs. Northrop, of Lenox, Mass., who d. Oct. 15, 1850.

For other descendants of Col. John Jones and Henrietta Cromwell in this country, and of their Cromwell relatives, see account of "The Latting Family" in The N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Record, vol. II (1871), pp. 63, 67.

He enlisted at the beginning of the war for three months under the first call for troops in the 13th N. Y. Regt., and shortly after the expiration of his term of service, joined the 87th N. Y. Regt. (Col. Stephen A, Dodge), as 2d Lieut. and was made 1st Lieut. for bravery at the battle of Fair Oaks. He was in the various battles that occurred along the Chickahominy. He resigned his commission, and removed to Iowa; but here he soon again entered the service in a cavalry company. He was put in command of a company of colored infantry in Mississippi and while out on a foraging expedition, they were all captured by a guerrilla company of confederates. The rebels carried in those days only a black flag towards all colored troops and their white officers. They were all bidden to kneel and receive their fate. One of the confederates, named Seymour, recognized Strong at the last moment, (it was in the dusk of evening), as one who had conferred a favor upon him in Virginia at an early period of the war, and caused them to spare his life. But he was compelled to see every one of his men coolly shot before his eyes. While in the hands of the rebels, Strong was bold in denouncing their spirit and conduct, and they determined to subdue him. At one time they hung him to a tree and left him there until he was nearly dead. At another time they tied his hands behind him, and let him down into a cistern where in standing on the tips of his toes, the water was up to his mouth. He survived these trials, and was at last incarcerated in a prison pen in Alabama, from which after several months' severe suffering, he was released by exchange of prisoners, and started for his western home. Arrived at Memphis he went on board the steamer Express which blew up as it was leaving the wharf, and hundreds of brave Union soldiers crowding its decks were killed, wounded and drowned in the sad catastrophe. Strong was blown out into the middle of the stream, but was unhurt and swam ashore, landing about a mile below the city. His children :

2941–2. iii. Hon. Demas Strong (son of Capt. Davis Swift Strong and Clarissa Braddock) b. April 22, 1820, in Middletown, Ct., m. Feb. 19, 1841, Jane A. Leaycraft b. August 12, 1825 (dau. of William Leaycraft of Williamsburgh, N. Y., and Grace Ann O'Bryan). He was apprenticed for some three years (1834–7) to a gold watch case manufacturer in New York and was after that for several years a clerk in a wholesale store in New York. In April, 1849, he established a trading post at Big Bar, California, and another at Coloma, Sutter's Mills, and afterwards built a store at San Francisco whence he removed to Sacramento City, where he was a merchant, erected several stores and dwellings and bought town lots largely. He was one of the first board of aldermen of this city and President of the Common Council, and during "the squatter riots" of this place when the mayor had been shot down he became the acting mayor of the city. In Dec. 1850, he returned to Brooklyn on a visit and was induced to remain there, and in 1856 succeeded in closing up his business in California. He studied law earnestly during his evenings while a merchant's clerk, and renounced mercantile life on his return to Brooklyn for the legal profession to practice in which he was soon admitted. He was appointed in 1854 by the Common Council of Williamsburgh one of the commissioners for consolidating that city with Brooklyn; in 1859 elected alderman of the 13th ward of the newly consolidated city and again in 1861; in 1864–5, State Senator. He was the author of the bill for establishing the New York State Institution for the Blind at Batavia, N. Y. Originally a democrat he became afterwards an active "free-soil" man, and was a member of the Convention that met in Utica, N. Y., in 1848, and nominated Martin Van Buren for the presidency of the U. S. Since 1856, he has been an active republican. He is now (1871) practising law in Brooklyn, E. D. He was the projector of the Brooklyn Cross Town R. Road and the chief promoter of its establishment of which he is now the acting President and Treasurer.

3389–90. iii. ADONIJAH STRONG (son of Asahel Strong of Colchester, Ct. and Betterus Crouch) b. May 21, 1749, m. Mary (Polly) Kellogg (dau. of Daniel Kellogg of Bolton, Ct.); a farmer in Chatham, Ct. He d. May 18, 1824, aged 75 years. She d. in 1822.

[The descendants of Adonijah Strong, numbering at that time in all 533, held a family festival Aug. 22, 1866, at Easthampton, Ct. Four generations were represented there, from grandchildren to great-great-great-grandchildren. Young and old sat down at two tables 200 feet long spread under a canopy of canvas and loaded with inviting viands. In the after part of the day they adjourned to a neighboring church and heard addresses from Henry Strong of East Berlin, Ct., and Gideon H. Welch of New Haven, Ct., followed by various speakers in prose and verse. Hon. Daniel Strong of Portland, Ct., stated that "no one of the family had ever been arraigned for any, even petty, crime, and that no one of them was ever an inmate of an almshouse or dependent on public or private charity for support." The day was spent in songs and speeches, prayers and praises, and sweet mutual converse. The band of the governor's guard at Hartford was present to enliven the occasion with music. The day of festivities was closed in form at an early hour with Auld Lang Syne and a Doxology. But the younger representatives of the family kept up the frolic to the gratification of many older than themselves to a late hour of the night. This large family had lost the line of its descent in some of its links, and had come to misconceive its very direction, thinking themselves descendants, very wrongly, of Jedediah Strong of Coventry, Ct. In a published account of their festival, they said, " From Jedediah Strong to Adonijah there is a break in the records which it is hoped and expected will be hereafter some day supplied and any one who can furnish any information on the subject will confer a favor by doing so." It gave the author special pleasure to be able to inform this large family of Strongs of their lost lineage.] Adonijah Strong had twelve children :

DESCENDANTS OF THOMAS STRONG OF NORTHAMPTON, SON OF ELDER JOHN STRONG.

6–7. iii. THOMAS STRONG (son of Elder John Strong of Northampton, and Abigail Ford), b. in 163–, was a trooper in 1658, at Windsor, under Major Mason (recorded March 11, 1657–8). He removed to Northampton with his father in 1659. He m. Dec. 5, 1660, Mary Hewett (sometimes misspelled "Huit") dau. of Rev. Ephraim Hewett of Windsor. She d. Feb. 20, 1670–1, and he m. for 2d wife Oct. 10, 1671, Rachel Holton dau. of Deacon William Holton of Northampton. He d. Oct. 3, 1689, and his widow Rachel m. for 2d husband May 16, 1698, Nathan Bradley of E. Guilford, Ct., now Madison, Ct. This marriage took her younger children with her into Southern Connecticut.

Of his 15 children, nine of whom were under 15 years of age, all but one were living at his death, after which one more also was born. He d. intestate. His estate was inventoried at £379 14*s*. The estate of his son Hewett was £28, and divided equally between his three brothers and sister, children of Mary Hewett. John, brother of Hewett d. insolvent. Thomas Strong was a farmer.

By the will of Thomas Strong his eldest son Thomas had "half the house and homestead forever; hoping he will come and live there and so be a help to his mother-in-law." The mother had "the whole of the rest of the estate for five years to bring up the children; then the estate to be divided according to law, Thomas to have a double portion — he to pay if half of whole is too much."

[Rev. Ephraim Hewett had been a minister in Wraxall, Warwickshire, Eng, and being proceeded against by Archbishop Laud, in 1638, for neglecting ceremonies, came to this country in 1639. "He was," says Allen, "a man of superior talents and eminent usefulness." He was settled in 1639 as colleague with Rev. John Warham in Windsor. He d. Sept. 4, 1644. His wife's name was Isabel.

Deacon William Holton was one of the first settlers of Hartford, Ct., and one of the eight original petitioners for liberty to plant and settle at Nonotuck (Northampton), whither he went in 1653. When the first board of magistrates was appointed in 1665 by the General court, it consisted of William Holton, Thomas Baseom and Edward Elmore. He was the first deacon of the church of Northampton (ordained June 13,

N. Y., æt. about 100. He was very fond of music, and taught and composed it. He composed a Revolutionary ballad which was quite popular in his day, and sung much in various places, entitled "America's Resolution to oppose the British Taxation." It consisted of 36 verses of 4 lines each, written in a free and easy style, and with more regard for the sense then the rhythm. Witness a few of the stanzas; the refrain in each verse being "North America."

The cruel lords of Britain, who glory in their shame!
The project they have hit on they joyfully proclaim:
'Tis what they are striving after — to take our rights away,
And rob us of our charter in North America.

They searched the gloomy regions of the infernal pit,
To find among those legions one who excelled in wit;
To ask of him assistance — to tell them how they may,
Subdue without resistance this North America.

We never will knock under! O George we do not fear,
The rattling of your thunder, nor lightning of your spear;
Though rebels you declare us, we're strangers to dismay,
Therefore you can not scare us in North America.

To what you have commanded we never will consent,
Although your troops are landed upon our continent;
We'll take our swords and muskets and march in dread array,
And drive the British red coats from North America.

Confusion to the tories, that black infernal name,
In whom Great Britain glories forever to their shame;
We'll send each foul revolter to smutty Africa,
Or noose them with a halter in North America.

Here's health unto our footmen that handle sword and gun,
To Warner, Gates and Putnam and conquering Washington!
Their names writ in letters that never shall decay,
While sun and moon do glitter in North America.

He had in progress at the time of his death a work on "Biblical Geography" and had completed 750 pages of it in manuscript. He was an indefatigable worker, had no fondness for abstractions, and was an exact and thorough teacher rather than brilliant or stimulating. He once told the author that the one man to whom he was more indebted than to any other in life as the one who taught him to know his own powers and to use his time and strength most effectively and had given direction to all his after-life was his old and honored mathematical professor in Hamilton College Prof. Theodore Strong. Mrs. Theresa Robinson resided after his death at Berlin, Germany and in straitened circumstances (through the mismanagement, it is said, of the ample funds left by her husband). She d. at Hamburgh, Germany, April 13, 1870, æt. 73.

5479. iv. EDWARD Robinson b. Sept. 19, 1836; a lawyer in New York, but since 1869, U. S. Consul at Hamburgh, Germany.

[It is meet that here the lineage of Dr. Edward Robinson should be traced, as copied from an historical sketch of his father's family, prepared and published by himself.

Ichabod Robinson, his grandfather, was b. at Duxbury, Mass., Dec. 12, 1720, and was a country merchant at Lebanon, Ct. He was also for 21 years (1747–68) clerk of the court of probate, for the district of Windham, of which court Jonathan Trumbull was at the same time judge, who was afterwards Governor of Connecticut, the first of the two governors of that name, and father of the second one who succeeded him in that office. They were brothers in law, as Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, the elder, married Faith Robinson, sister of Ichabod Robinson. Their son, Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, the second, was born March 26, 1740, and d. while Governor, Aug. 7, 1809, aged 69. There was also a third Gov. Trumbull (Joseph), who was son of David, another son of Jonathan Trumbull, the first, and Faith Robinson. Harriet Trumbull b. Sept 2, 1783, who d. Jan. 18, 1850, daughter of the second Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, was the wife of Prof. Benjamin Silliman of Yale College. Her sister, Faith Trumbull, b. Feb. 1, 1769, who d. Oct. 19, 1846, was the wife of Daniel Wadsworth, Hartford, Ct.

Ichabod Robinson was the son of Rev. John Robinson of Duxbury, Mass. (1700–1738), who spent his last days (1738–1745), at Lebanon, Ct, where he d. of diabetes Nov. 14, 1745. His wife was Hannah Wiswall b. Feb. 22, 1681–2 (dau. of Rev. Ichabod Wiswall of Duxbury, and Priscilla Peabody whom he m. Jan. 31, 1705–6, and who was drowned with her daughter Mary Sept. 22, 1722, near Nantasket Beach. Priscilla Peabody b. Jan. 15, 1653–4, was the dau. of William Peabody of Duxbury, and Elizabeth Alden (b. in 1625, and married Dec. 26, 1644), dau. of John Alden of the Mayflower and Priscilla Mullins, dau. of William Mullins, whom she m. in 1621.

Rev. John Robinson of Duxbury, Mass., b. in Dorchester, Mass., in 1671, and grad. at Harvard in 1695, was the son of Samuel Robinson and Mary Baker (dau. of Richard Baker of Dorchester in 1639). Samuel Robinson, his father, was a man of mark at Dorchester, and a representative to the General court (1701–2). He was bp. May 14, 1640, and d. in Dorchester Sept. 16, 1718, and was the son of William Robinson the settler and Prudence his wife, who lived in Dorchester. William Robinson was a miller and was killed July 6, 1668, in his own mill, "being drawn through by the cog-wheel and was torn in pieces and slain." He came to this country in 1635 or 1636, as is supposed.]

He was dismissed from his pastoral charge in Nov., 1833, after a ministerial service of 40 years in length to his people. He d. May 10, 1853, aged 87. His wife d. Sept. 11, 1839, aged 69. He had a fine farm about a mile from the village on which he toiled during the week, which was the all but universal style of pastoral experience in the early history of the American clergy. He was a great pedestrian and always walked into town on the sabbath to preach, and during week-days to get his mail. His last years (1833–53), he devoted to the care of his crops and fruit. He was full of vitality and vigor in old age. He was of medium stature, of rather dark complexion, and had originally black hair with black eyes. Of naturally conservative habits of thought, he was sound rather than specially attractive as a preacher. He was entirely free from all ostentation and parade, and was a simple-minded good man, devoted to his work as a preacher and pastor, in which he was much blessed. His manners were very courteous and refined. [William Pitkin, a lawyer, settled in Hartford, Ct., about 1665, m. Hannah Goodwin (dau. of Ozias Goodwin the settler). He d. 4081–3. vi. Justice Joseph Strong (son of Thomas Strong of Northampton and Rachel Holton, his second wife) b. Dec. 2, 1672, m. in 1694, Sarah Allen b. Aug. 22, 1672 (dau. of Nehemiah Allen of Northampton and Sarah Woodford). [Nehemiah Allen was the son of Samuel Allen who came to Cambridge, Mass., from Braintree, Essex, Eng., in 1632 with two brothers, Dea. Thomas Allen and Col. Matthew Allen, who both settled in 1635 with Hooker's Company in Hartford. Samuel Allen also went to Connecticut in 1635 and settled at Windsor, where he died in April, 1648, leaving his widow, Ann, with six children surviving him. She removed with her family to Northampton where she m. for a 2d husband William Hurlbut. Says Stiles, from whom this account is copied, (supplement to Hist. An. Windsor, p. 25): "Among her deseendants by Samuel Allen were many men of note." Her children by him were: 1. Samuel Allen, Jr., of Northampton, who m. Nov. 29, 1659, Hannah Woodford, he d. Oct. 18, 1703. 2. Nehemiah Allen who m. Sept. 21, 1664, Sarah Woodford. He had nine children. 3. John Allen, who m. Mary Hannum and settled in Deerfield where he was killed by Indians in May, 1704. His sons John and Samuel settled in Enfield, Ct. 4. Abigail Allen. 5. Dea. Obadiah Allen of Middletown, Ct. 6. A child (neither name nor sex given). See also Hinman's First Puritan Settlers (pp. 41–5). This family was connected in its early history, with the Newberrys of Windsor, the Strongs of Coventry, the Pynchons of Springfield, and the Southmayds of Middletown, Ct. Rev. Thomas Allen of Pittsfield, Mass. (its first minister), was the son of Joseph b. in 1696, who d. in 1799, æt. 83, who was the son of Samuel, Jr. b. in 1676, who d. in 1739, æt. 63, son of Samuel 1.] She d. and he m. Sept. 15, 1724, for 2d wife Ruth (name not discovered), of Coventry, Ct. He removed from Northampton to Coventry, in March, 1716, seven years after the first settlement of that town. He was a farmer, and a man of property and consideration. He held various town offices of importance, as town treasurer in 1716; selectman for six years; and justice of the peace for many years from 1723 onwards. In 1721, the first year that Coventry was represented in the Colonial Legislature, he was sent to it as the representative of the town. There were two sessions yearly of the Legislature, in May and October, until 1819. Justice Joseph Strong was for fifty-two times elected a member of the Legislature and including extra sessions was during sixty-five sessions a member of the General Assembly of Connecticut. He was moderator of the first town-meeting held April 24, 1718, and often afterwards of others, holding the office for the last time April 11, 1763, when 90 years old. He was a member of the Colonial Legislature for the last time in May, 1762, when 89 years old, his son Phinehas being the other representative with him from Coventry. He must have been a man of remarkable physical vitality, and a fine specimen of the "Sana mens in sano corpore." There seems to have been a good deal of town pride taken in sending such a venerable man to the Assembly. "He and his sons" says Dr. Porter, "were persons of property and standing." He d. Dec. 23, 1763, æt. 91. His children were all by the first marriage, and were all, except Phinehas, born in Northampton. His widow Ruth d. at Glastenbury, Ct., Feb. 14, 1768.

[From Dr. J. B. Porter of Coventry, Ct. —since deceased — the author derived much of the account here given of Justice Joseph Strong and his immediate children. He says of the first settlers of Coventry: "They were universally, I believe, farmers in those days. Even mechanics were ambitious of owning a farm and generally did own one. I do not think that any of the Strongs were mechanics. The settlers who came from Northampton, Hadley, etc., were men of some means and came to this town in my opinion for the sake of peace. The history of the river-towns in Massachusetts, even down to Springfield, was a bloody one. I do not think that a single white person was ever killed by an Indian within the limits of Coventry. Connecticut was preferable, on account of Indians, to Western Massachusetts.

Dr. Porter left a manuscript history of Coventry well advanced towards completion which it is hoped that that historic town will not allow to sleep much longer in "dumb forgetfulness."]

Y., April 25, 1808 (son of Samuel Stranahan and Lynda Josselyn, dau. of Thomas Josselyn of Butternuts of N. Y., and Martha Eddy). In 1832 he undertook the work of founding, in behalf of a large capitalist in New York, the manufacturing village of Florence, Oneida Co. N. Y., now a place of some 2,000 people (1870). In 1838 he was a member of the Assembly of New York. In 1840 he removed to Newark, N. J., and became a R. R. contractor, and with his partners built one-fourth of the N. Y. and Erie rail road, two-thirds of the Great Western Railway, from Niagara Falls to Detroit, and one-half of the Boston Water Works. In 1844 he removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., and took charge of building the Atlantic Docks in Brooklyn, which he and his associates have since come to own for themselves. A large tract of marsh opposite Governor's Island has thus been redeemed to the most valuable uses. Stone warehouses, covering twenty acres of space on the docks and land, line the river front and surround the ample basin provided for them. Twelve millions of bushels of grain are sometimes stored in this greatest grain depot in the world. The company have also erected immense grain elevators, which, with their stores, are leased. He is the Prest. of the Co.,

and has almost the entire management of its affairs. He was elected member of the 34th Congress (1858–9); one of the Police Commissioners for the Metropolitan Dist. of N. Y., in 1858; and was one of the Lincoln and Johnson Presidential electors in 1864. During the late war he was Prest. of the War Fund Com. of Brooklyn. He is now (1870) Prest. of the Commission for laying out Prospect Park in Brooklyn, and a director of various banks, insurance companies, &c. Mrs. Mariamne Fitch Stranahan d. at Manchester, Vt., Aug. 30, 1866, aged 53. She was for eight years first Directress of the Graham Institute for the Relief of Aged and Indigent Females. Here her superior executive abilities, her discretion, tact and energy were conspicuous; but still more in her management of the Woman's Relief Association, organized in Brooklyn, Nov. 23, 1862, as auxiliary to the U. S. Sanitary Commission, in whose work eighty churches of different denominations cooperated with numerous auxiliaries all over the land. More than half a million of dollars passed through its hands, $300,000 of which were paid in cash into the Treasury of the U. S. Sanitary Com., and hospital supplies to the amount of over $200,000 more were furnished. The business details of this great undertaking passed constantly under her eye. Few women ever bear so much public responsibility, and few of either sex bear it so well. He m. for a 2d wife in 1870, Miss Clara Harrison of Brooklyn.

6154. vi. CAPT. NATHAN HALE (son of Dea. Richard Hale and Elizabeth Strong) b. June 6, 1755. His mother and particularly his grandmother Strong, continually inspired and cherished the desire for mental and moral improvement in his young mind. He entered Yale Coll., in 1769, where he distinguished himself as a scholar, especially in the languages, and as a man of fine literary taste, and of easy and eloquent speech, and was grad. in 1773, among the honorable ones of a class whose subsequent history proved that it had many young men of superior talent in it. During the two years after he left college he taught school with great zest and acceptance at East Haddam, and New London, Ct. He was five feet 10 inches high, of a fine and commanding figure, having a broad chest, full face, blue eyes, light complexion and brown hair, and was very muscular and agile. His features were bright with the vigor and vivacity of health, and with strong good sense and most kindly feeling. He was in truth a man of genius, very affectionate in his disposition, neat in his personal appearance, of refined address, and of earnest habits of intellectual industry and progress, impressing all who knew him with the many superior characteristics of his heart and life. When the news of the battle at Lexington (April 19, 1775), reached New London, Hale was among the first to hurl defiance at the spirit of British aggression in public, saying in a meeting called at once for deliberation by the authorities of the town: "Let us march immediately and never lay down our arms until we obtain our independence." He enrolled at once as a volunteer, and the next morning closed his school for the time being with affectionate counsel to his pupils, and prayer, shaking them each by the hand. "A sense of duty" he said, "urged him to sacrifice every thing for his country." "School keeping," he said afterwards in a note addressed to the proprietors of the school, "is a business of which I was always fond; but since my residence in this town every thing has conspired to render it more agreeable. I have thought much of never quitting it but with life, but at present there seems to be an opportunity for more extended public service." On July 6th, 1775, he enlisted as Lieut. in the third company of the Seventh Conn. Regiment, of which in Sept. following he was made Captain. He loved to say "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori." His post was frequently one of much peril, and his labors at times were very arduous. In his camp diary, still preserved, such entries are frequent as these: "Mounted picket guard: mounted main guard: slept little or none." When in November, 1775, the army was threatened with dissolution in some sections of it by the expiration of enlistments he went around personally among very many of the men addressing them earnestly, and promised them that if they would remain another month they should have his wages for that time, and redeemed his pledge in thus persuading them to stand still by their suffering country in the battle-field, by borrowing the money of a brother officer on the credit of his own advance pay. In April, 1776, he went with troops under Genl. Heath, to New York. Here he captured, by a bold attack at night, a British sloop laden with supplies lying under cover of the guns of a British ship of war in the East river.

After the disastrous battle of Long Island in Sept. 1776, Gen. Washington felt and said that some one must penetrate the British camp on the Island and learn the secret of their intended movements; or the American army, with large numbers of them sick, and the well suffering from insufficient supplies and all disheartened by their recent defeat, would be lost. He instructed Col. Knowlton to select some competent person for the dangerous but needful enterprise. He who was to run such hazards must not only be brave and patriotic to the last degree, but intelligent also, and skilful and far-seeing. No private appeal made for such a trying service met with a favorable response. A council of officers was held, the claims of the painful exigency of the hour were presented, and the question was put: "What shall be done? Who will undertake this fearful enterprise?" Hale, who had come late into the assembly, said with a prompt, cheerful voice: "I will!" He had just recovered from severe sickness and looked still pale and weak. His fellow-officers remonstrated with him. He replied: "I think I owe to my country the accomplishment of an object so important and so much desired by the commander of her armies; and I know no other mode of obtaining the information than by assuming a disguise and passing into the enemy's camp. I am fully sensible of the consequences of discovery and capture in such a situation. But for a year I have been attached to the army and have not rendered any material service. I wish to be useful, and every kind of service necessary for the public good becomes honorable by being necessary. If the exigencies of my country demand a peculiar service, its claims to the performance of that service are imperious." Receiving particular instructions from Washington himself and conveyed by his order by the armed sloop Huntington, across the Sound from Norwalk, Ct., to the Long Island shore, he went in his disguise as a schoolmaster all through the enemy's camp, saw all their plans of offense and defense, studied all their movements, prepared accurate drawings of their military positions, and was on his return homewards having done all things wisely and well, when unfortunately, close by the spot where he had at first disembarked, he was stopped and searched, and discovered by some armed British sailors. He was soon sent to New York and brought before Gen. Howe for examination who condemned him to be hung the next morning as a spy, which was done by a brutal wretch near the corner of Chambers and Centre streets, New York, Sept. 22, 1776. His last words were: "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." Thus nobly lived and nobly died America's youthful martyr, when but 21 years old. A monument of Quincy granite forty-five feet high has been erected to his memory at Coventry, and when his life was exhaled from his own mortal frame it passed forever into the hearts of his countrymen. An interesting sketch of his life and character, with the genealogy and part of his family, was published in 1856 (Hartford, Ct., F. A. Brown) by J. W. Stuart. From this book the foregoing account of him and his family has been largely compiled.

June 7, 1753, Jane Gelston of Southampton, L. I., b. April 13, 1729 (dau. of Judge Hugh Gelston of Southampton, the settler, and Mary Maltby, his wife).

[Judge Hugh Gelston came from Belfast, Ireland, in 1717, with his brother Rev. Samuel Gelston, who was settled in Southampton for 10 years (1717–27), as colleague pastor of the Presbyterian Church of that place with Rev. Joseph Whiting. He was born in 1698 and d. Dec. 13, 1775, æt. 77. He was made judge of the Court of Common Pleas for Suffolk Co., L. I., for 21 years, having been appointed in 1752 and reappointed in 1764 and 1771. He was an Irish Presbyterian. His wife Mary Maltby was the daughter of John Maltby, Jr. (b. in New Haven, Ct., June 1, 1673), and Susannah Clark his wife. They had but two children, Mary (Mrs. Gelston), and Sarah b. in 1705, who d. Sept. 8, 1723, æt. 18. John Maltby, Sr., father of John Maltby, Jr., came with his brother William, both of the rank of "gentlemen," from Yorkshire, Eng., to New Haven about 1670. They engaged in commercial pursuits. John Maltby m. about 1671 Mary Bryan of Milford, Ct., dau. of Richard Bryan and granddaughter of Hon. Alexander Bryan who came from Ashton, Clinton, Bucks, Eng. She was b. at Milford, Ct., in 1654 and was but 17 at her marriage. Their children were twins, John and Mary Maltby, b. at New Haven, June 1, 1673. Mills Bordwell Gelston b. Aug. 27, 1817, settled in Naples, N. Y.]

Rev. Joseph Strong was grad. at Yale in 1749. He was the first minister of Granby, Ct. for 27 years (1752–79), and a chaplain for a season (probably 1780) to the Continental troops on Long Island in the Revolution. He was installed pastor of the Congregational church at Williamsburgh, Mass., Dec. 26, 1781, where he continued until 1803. He sometimes fitted students for college. During his pastorship at Granby 140 converts were admitted to the church. That he was a man of decided convictions is manifest from a story still told of him at Granby. A Baptist minister came that way and desired to preach to his people. The church committee agreed to let him preach in the church, but Mr. Strong "was not agoing to have any such doctrines preached in his pulpit," and he forbade him the use of the house. The Baptist preacher however accomplished his object by haranguing those who came to hear him from the door-steps of the church. He d. in Goshen, Mass., Jan. 1, 1803: she d. Sept. 21, 1811, aged 82. His epitaph at Williamsburgh reads thus (written probably by his son Rev. Joseph Strong of Heath): "To the memory of Rev. Joseph Strong who d. Jan. 1, 1803, in the 76th year of his age and the 52d of his ministry. Naturally possessed of great self-command, a correct judgment and a penetrating mind, he was eminently qualified for ruling a church and silencing opposers. By a faithful examination of the scriptures he acquired a thorough knowledge of their truths and in his discourses taught them with perspicuity. His ministry was crowned with remarkable success." His estate amounted at its settlement to £1,006 5s. in cash, aside from lands and houses, some 200 acres with two houses on them, one of which fell with half the land to his son William and the other to Gelston. The papers which he has left show that he was a very thorough, prompt and careful business man, as was also evinced by his thrift.

bridge b. Oct. 16, 1761 (dau. of Rev. John Woodbridge of South Hadley and widow Martha (Clark) Strong, (widow of Daniel Strong of Northampton and dau. of Samuel Clark, Jr., of Northampton, whose wife was widow Mary Davis, relict of John Davis).

[The pedigree of Rev. John Woodbridge of South Hadley was as follows:

I. Rev. John Woodbridge of Stanton, England, who m. the eldest dau. of Rev. Robert Parker (called by Mather, "one of the greatest scholars in the English nation, and in some sort the father of all nonconformists our day").

II. Rev. John, his son, b. at Stanton, England, in 1613. While in the University at Oxford, the oath of conformity was required of him, which he declined to take, and was therefore compelled to leave the University. In 1634 he came to this country with his uncles, Rev. Thomas Parker and Rev. Mr. Noyes (who m. Mr. Parker's sister), who were settled as the first ministers at Newbury, Mass. In 1641, he m. Mercy Dudley, b. Sept. 27, 1621, in England (dau. of Gov. Thomas Dudley of Mass., and Dorothy his wife).

Gov. Dudley came to New England, June 12, 1630, with Winthrop. He was then 54 years old, vigorous and earnest, a man of thorough uprightness, of stern principles and blunt manners, a pilgrim of the genuine mould. He was made governor in 1634, and 1640, 1645, and 1650, and was constantly in the magistracy as governor, deputy governor, or "assistant," from his arrival in the country until his death, July 31, 1653, aged 77. In 1644, he was appointed to the office of Major-general, then first created. He resided at Roxbury, Mass. Henry VII conferred the title and estate of the Warwick family, then become extinct, upon Edmund Dudley a celebrated lawyer and speaker of the House of Commons, b. in 1442, and executed by his enemies in 1510. His son, John Dudley, became Duke of Northumberland and was the father of Ambrose, styled "the good earl of Warwick;" of Lord Guilford, the husband of "Lady Jane Grey;" of Robert, "Earl of Leicester," the favorite of Queen Elizabeth and lord of Kenilworth Castle. Northumberland was beheaded Aug. 15, 1553, as were also Lord Guilford and Lady Jane Grey.

Roger Dudley, father of Gov. Thomas Dudley, was of the same family of Dudleys and of the same generation with Northumberland. Gov. Thomas Dudley had a daughter Ann, a poetess, who m. Gov. Simon Bradstreet of Mass., and a daughter Patience who m. Major Gen. Daniel Dennison of Mass., and by his second marriage to widow Catharine Hackburne, a son, Gov. Joseph Dudley, governor of Mass., and first Chief Justice of New York.

Rev. John Woodbridge of Newbury went back to England after a resi- of eight years to settle up his father's estate. On returning again to this country he was settled (Sept. 16, 1644) at Andover, Mass., but in 1647, he was induced to go back again to England, where he remained, preaching in different places for fifteen years. But being ejected in 1662, he came to this country once more and finally in 1663, with his wife and twelve children. He settled at Newbury, Mass., as colleague with his cousin, Rev. Mr. Parker, for several years. He was several times chosen first magistrate for the colony, and was for a number of years justice of the peace for the county of Essex. Sept. 23, 1818, Lucy Dix, b. at Littleton, Mass., April 3, 1798 (dau. of John Dix and Huldah Warren). [John Dix was engaged in trade at St. Domingo, W. I., having resided there for several years, when the insurrection of the blacks occurred, and narrowly escaped death by taking refuge on board of the vessel that he commanded. He married at the age of 40, his wife when in her 20th year. Her ancestors were among the first settlers of Littleton.] Prof. Strong was graduated at Yale in 1812, taking the prize in mathematics and a high stand in all his studies; became at once tutor in Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y. (1812–16), and professor of mathematics and natural philosophy there for 11 years (1816–27), and at Rutgers college, New Brunswick, N. J., for 35 years (1827–62). He was one of the original members of the National Academy of Arts and Sciences. From the first the whole strength of his distinguished and cultivated powers of mind was given to mathematical studies. The hardest problems which had long baffled the efforts of others for their solution he liked most to attack and conquer. His range, in fact, of mathematical investigation and attainment spread through the highest sphere of such inquiries where Newton and La Place had gone before him. He early resolved some difficult questions pertaining to the geometry of a circle, propounded as a challenge to all mankind in Rees' Encyclopedia by some distinguished Scotch mathematicians. He completed the solution of cubic equations in a truly scientific way, which none of the European mathematicians had ever been able to accomplish. By a most ingenious mode of factoring he devised also a method of extracting any root of any integral number by a direct process. In 1859 he published a Treatise on Algebra, in which he presented the whole science in original forms of his own, a thorough piece of solid intellectual mason-work. In the summer of 1867 he wrote out largely, if not wholly, at Clinton, N. Y., a volume on the differential and integral calculus, full of new processes and results of his own origination. In this splendid treatise he exhibits the highest style of analytic power of mind. For fifty years a teacher of the higher mathematics; and for nearly sixty an earnest and successful student of them, he bore with him throughout all his long life, the characteristics of a man devoted to the highest and best ends of human pursuit. He was industrious, thoughtful, simple-minded, humble, cheerful, and happy. He was a man of remarkable gentleness of spirit, and at the same time of great ardor in his moral convictions. He abhorred shams of all kinds, and everything like intrigue and mean insinuations and intentions. In conversation, disquisition and debate, of all of which he was quite fond, his eyes and features were always on the move with life. He was a positive patriot, and took a great interest in the political and social questions of the times, and occupied always the advanced positions of the hour in all matters of social reform. He was a man of full height and breadth in his physique, of dark complexion and dark eyes, and of a very intellectual face. He was always very regular in all his bodily habits, and enjoyed generally robust health. He possessed a competency of worldly goods from the beginning of his professional labors; and while his life was checkered with many trials, it abounded in many and great blessings to the very end. He was a man of most decided and unwavering faith in the word of God. The great facts of revealed religion stood out as clear to his eye as those of mathematical truth, and they were all precious to his heart He did not indeed join the church of Christ on earth, because of his great distrust of his own heart, until a short time before his death; but he everywhere openly confessed Christ among men all his days, and was a man of childlike faith in God and prayer, and a great lover of the Bible and of good men. He said to the author, when almost 80 years of age, when speaking of this beautiful world and of our grandly appointed life in it: "We ought to go through life shouting." He d. at New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 1, 1869.

The father of Benjamin Woolsey, Jr., was Rev. Benjamin Woolsey b. at Jamaica, L. I., Nov. 19, 1687 (son of George Woolsey the settler, and and Rebecca his wife), grad. at Yale in 1707, m. in 1714, Abigail Taylor (dau. of John Taylor of Oyster Bay, L. I., and Mary Whitehead). He was pastor for 16 years of the First church in Southold, L. I. (1720–36). Mrs. Abigail (Taylor) Woolsey inherited from her father the valuable estate of 300 acres to which he gave the name Dosoris (dos uxoris the wife's dowry) on which they resided afterwards (1736–56). He was a man of superior talents and attainments, and devoted to the service of God, and a man of fine personal appearance. He d Aug. 15, 1756, aged 69.

George Woolsey the settler (grandfather of Rev. Benjamin Woolsey), was b. Oct. 27, 1610, at Yarmouth, Eng., and resided for some time in Holland, it is supposed, with his father Benjamin Woolsey son of Thomas Woolsey; whence he came while yet a mere boy with the Dutch emigrants in 1623. He resided for several years in New Amsterdam (New York), and is believed to have been a merchant. In 1647, he purchased a farm at Flushing, then just being settled, where he established himself, but afterwards removed to Jamaica, L. I., where he d. Aug. 17, 1698, aged 87 or 88. Dr. Benjamin Woolsey Dwight was grad. at Yale in 1799. He practised medicine for a time at Catskill, N. Y.; but chronic ill health in connection with the asthma compelled him to relinquish his favorite profession, and he became a wholesale and importing hardware merchant there (1817–31). In April, 1831, he removed to Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., upon a farm of some 80 acres, and was at once appointed Treasurer of Hamilton College, which office he filled with great zeal in behalf of the diminished finances of that institution for 19 years (1831–50). He was 5 feet 11 inches in height, of a spare figure, weighing about 150 lbs., of dark brown hair, light complexion, light blue eyes, a little bent in his port, but of a firm quick step. He was a great sufferer during the first half of his life from chronic dyspepsia. He d of pleurisy, May 18, 1850, aged 70.

Rev. Dr. Wm. B. Sprague says truly of him, in his Annals of the American Pulpit, vol. II, p. 158: "He was a man of literary taste, of a philosophical turn of mind and of a most exemplary Christian character" He was an earnest, thoughtful, energetic good man, alike honest and independent in forming and expressing his opinions, of strong scholarly tastes and of thoroughly religious convictions and habits.

Mrs. Sophia Woodbridge Dwight suffered greatly from poor health for many years. She was a lady of great personal beauty of face and dignity of mien, of queenly ideas and bearing and of brilliant powers of mind, and a most devoted Christian "full of faith and good works." She was of a tall and portly figure of a somewhat dark complexion and dark brown hair with dark hazel eyes, and an illuminated countenance and most cheerful inspiring manners. Her constitution was one of immense vitality, although sadly impaired by disease for life in the early part of her history. She d. at Clinton after 11 years of great feebleness Dec. 3, 1861, æt. 68, For a fuller sketch of Dr. and Mrs. Dwight, see "In Memoriam" of them both (in the libraries of the N. Y. Hist. Society and of Yale College).

She d. March 25, 1834, without issue. He m. for 2d wife, May 28, 1840, Mrs. Harriet Torry née Atwood, widow of M. C. Torry. She was an amateur artist. He practised medicine at Boston, Mass., for more than 40 years. He was a man of positive habits of thought, of extensive classical scholarship and of a good deal of medical skill, especially in difficult cases of chronic disease. His style of practice in such cases was of what is called the heroic kind. He was very fond of philosophic and theological speculations. She d. Dec. 28, 1851. He d. March 29, 1861. They had one child:

6608. 1. Harriet Elizabeth Strong b. March 2, 1849, who d. March 25, 1859.

July 29, 1795 (son of Gardner Avery of Munson, Mass., and Amy Newell). He was principal of different academies at Clinton, Homer, Fairfield, and Belleville, all in New York, and for four years (1830–4) kept a boys' boarding school at Clinton. He was grad. at Ham. College, N. Y., in 1820, and was from 1834 to 1869 professor of chemistry and natural philosophy in that institution. In 1834–5 he raised the greater part of fifty thousand dollars for Hamilton College, which he and Dr. Sereno Edwards Dwight, then Prest. of the college, secured as a permanent fund for its maintenance. In 1854–5 he raised seventy-two thousand dollars during two years of special effort for the purpose while at the same time giving in each year his regular course of chemical lectures in the college. Of this sum twenty thousand dollars were devoted, half to the building of the Astronomical Observatory, and half to the purchase of the fine large telescope in the Observatory, having an object glass of 13 inches in diameter, one of the finest in the country. Two thousand more were expended in building a new chemical laboratory which like the Observatory and telescope was a matter wholly of his own origination and procurement. As long as the Observatory lasts, now called the Litchfield Observatory, from the generous contribution of thirty thousand dollars for its proper management by Edwin C. Litchfield, Esq., of Brooklyn, N. Y., the name of Prof. Charles Avery, its sole originator and founder, should be gratefully remembered, and it doubtless will be. In 1859 he raised ten thousand dollars in Clinton, and in connection with a newly appointed college commissioner, fourteen thousand dollars more in Utica for the purposes of a general college fund. He introduced into his department of instruction, for the first time, chemical analysis and agricultural chemistry, and made the chemical equipments of the college, which at his entrance into his professorship amounted literally to nothing, such as to compare favorably with those of the best endowed colleges of the land. He procured also by direct personal effort a number of the permanently endowed prizes of the college, as the Clark, Kellogg, and Underwood prizes; and first originated the system of endowed prizes, which are so numerous in that institution, and which are all offshoots of those which he first secured. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and has just been elected (May, 1871) Professor of Chemistry in the Homœopathic College of New York.

Dr. H. G. O. Dwight was grad. at Ham. Coll., N. Y. in 1825, and at Andover Theol. Sem. in 1828, and sailed as a missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. to the east Jan. 1830. After making for 15 months a tour with Eli Smith through Asia Minor, Persia, Armenia, and Georgia he established himself in Constantinople as his field of action, and was the first Frank to gain a residence in old Stamboul. Here he engaged in abundant labors with his tongue and pen in his Master's cause. He composed also books and tracts in the native languages, translated portions of the scriptures, and was the author of several volumes published in America and England, as "Researches of Smith and Dwight in Armenia:" "Memoir of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Dwight:" "Christianity Revived in the East." "A Complete Catalogue of Literature in Armenia." His travels were very extensive and frequent throughout all the lands of Western Asia, the different parts of Europe, and various portions of our own country. He was among the most active and successful of all our American missionaries. He revisited his native land in Nov. 1861, pleaded the holy cause of missions in many pulpits, went in deep sympathy with his suffering country, within the lines of her armies in Kentucky and Virginia, to which he had committed two of his own sons previously, to participate in the conflict; preached for the last time at the National Capital and started to attend some missionary anniversaries in Canada, and when on his way thither on the Troy and Bennington Rail Road in Jan. 25, 1862, was suddenly killed, and without a scar or bruise, or visible contortion of his features in death. A whirlwind struck the train on which he was, as it passed by an open gorge, and overturned the car in which he sat, hurling it down an embankment. His remains were interred at Utica.

His widow resides now (1871) at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

When five years of age she wandered off after her brother up the Catskill mountains, who had gone for the cattle, and was not observed by him until too far distant from her home for him to return with her then. Putting her in a safe place and bidding her await his return, he went on in pursuit of his estrays and found them in the end, but not his little sister, when he returned to the spot where he left her. She had become wearied with waiting and started for home in the wrong direction. The whole neighborhood was aroused at once to the search for the wandering child. The mountain side was the haunt of wolves, and guns were fired and torches kept blazing all night in various directions to scare them away. The next day she was found with her clothing nearly torn off from her by the brambles, through which she had passed, and told her parents that when night came she lay down by a mossy rock and called for each one of the family, and then for the dog, and cried herself to sleep. Prayer and praise were offered at her home by hearts bursting with gratitude to God for his sheltering care of their little darling in the lone woods through the dark night.

The English Book of Heraldry states that the names Floyd and Lloyd, both Welsh, are indentical. Their coats of arms also are the same, the crest, a ducal coronet.

For these memoranda concerning the Nicoll and Floyd families, the author is indebted to the genealogical notes of William Floyd Platt, Esq., of Oswego, prepared by him in 1842–3, when too feeble to attend to mercantile pursuits, and kindly put at the author's disposal by Mrs. Catharine A. Platt, his widow. Some dates and other items of value were obtained also from this source in various parts of the Record.

He was b. at Newton, Northamptonshire, Eng., Feb. 2, 1655; appointed by Charles II, in 1675, Gov. of Tangiers, Africa, which with Bombay was a part of the marriage portion given to Catharine, wife of Charles, by the king of Portugal. He intended to make it a place of trade and to establish a colony there for the purpose; but as the project did not succeed, it was abandoned in 1683. Smith on his return engaged in trade in London, but on Aug. 6, 1686, came with his family to New York and purchased, Oct. 22, 1687, land at Brookhaven. He afterwards bought a very large tract which with that of his first purchase he erected into a manor called St. George's manor. He was made associate judge of the Supreme Court of the Colony of New York in May, 1691, and Chief Justice of the same, Nov. 11, 1692, and held the office until Oct. 30, 1700, when on account of his loyalty he was removed by the new Colonial Governor, Earl of Bellamont, who was of the Leisler party. On June 9, 1702, he was re-appointed Chief Justice and held the office until April, 1703. He m. at Tangiers, Nov. 6, 1675, Martha Tunstall (dau. of Henry Tunstall of Putney, Surrey, Eng.). He d. Martindale), division surgeon (on the staff of Major Gen. John G. Foster in the First Division of the Burnside Expedition) and Medical Director of the Department of North Carolina, and of the 18th Army Corps. In these different positions of great responsibility he organized many effective improvements in hospital accommodations on a large scale. He had at one time under his direction 167 surgeons and assistant surgeons, some 50 hospital stewards and 1,000 or more non-commissioned officers, with 3,000 men sick under his care, in the regimental, post and general hospitals. He was commissioned Brigade Surgeon by President Lincoln April 4, 1862, and resigned June 16, 1864, with the rank of Major of Cavalry. In the spring of 1863, when Washington on the Pamlico river, N. C., was surprised and invested by the enemy, Gen. Foster and several members of his staff being there on a visit of inspection at the time, were shut up in the town. They were short of ammunition, and Dr. Snelling and Capt. Gouraud of his staff being desirous of joining the General, ran by the batteries in a small boat, followed by a little flotilla with a limited supply of powder and shot. He is now a practising physician in New York.

[Mr. Andrew S. Snelling is a lineal descendant of John Alden who was the first civilized man that set foot on Plymouth Rock, Dec. 22, 1620. His wife was Priscilla Mullins by whom he had eight children. His son John Alden, m. in 1660, Elizabeth Scoville. Their son William Alden, m. Mary Drivey in 1691, and settled in Boston. Mary Alden, their dau. m. in 1736, Joseph Gale, whose daughter Lydia Gale, m. Oct. 20, 1763, Col. Andrew Symmes. Their daughter, Lydia Symmes, m. July 2, 1795, Jonathan Snelling, who were the parents of Andrew Symmes Snelling, Esq. "The Alden House" as it has been always called in the family, was built by William Alden in 1691, on the corner of Sudbury and Alden streets, Boston, and has been until 1861, in the possession of his descendants with never any lien or mortgage upon it. It has now become the property of the Unitarian Association: the house having been pulled down in 1861, as uninhabitable.

The Snelling lineage is as follows: John Snelling, son of Thomas Snelling owner of Chattlewood, in Plympton, St. Mary's, Devon, Eng., died in Boston, 1672, having come thither as is supposed in 1657. His son Joseph b. in 1667, who d. Aug. 15, 1726, had a son Capt. Jonathan Snelling b. Dec. 29, 1697, who d. Jan. 4, 1755. He commanded the Cæsar, 20 guns, the second in size and armament at the siege and taking of Louisburgh from the French in 1745. Joseph Snelling (son of Capt. Jonathan) was a commissary in the Revolutionary war, appointed by Genl. Ward at Cambridge. On the morning of the battle of Bunker Hill, he started with a long train of wagons full of supplies for the army; on their reaching Charlestown Neck, a sloop of war ("The Lively" it is believed) opened fire upon them and on the fall of one of the teamsters, the others threw down their whips and ran away. He at once, with Col. Bradford, an associate commissary, took charge of the train and drove it on under fire from the enemy to its destination. He was distinguished for his intelligence, courage and genial disposition. He m. Oct. 13, 1762, Rachel Mayer who bore him eleven children. He was born Dec. 5, 1741, and d. Feb. 6, 1816, æt. 75. He had only the commission of a militia officer, but was exceedingly active against the tories in the Highlands, and especially in intercepting parties on their way from Albany to New York; his regiment being under the command of Col. Jesse Woodhull. Claudius Smith, with a band of marauders from New York, waylaid him in the mountains and fired at him without harm; but on Nov. 6, 1778, they went to his house and fired at him in his bed room, through the window, which, though without any shutter, was curtained, and fired without effect. The major's pistols, although loaded, were useless at the moment, from the fact that their priming was covered with paper. Promising that his life should be spared if no opposition was made to their ingress, they broke into his house and through the locked door of his private room, and shot him dead upon the spot. The assassins fled to New York, but hearing ere long that they were staying at a certain house on Long Island, a party of the major's friends crossed the Sound at once, captured the villains and brought them to Orange county for trial, where at a Court of Oyer and Terminer, Smith was tried and convicted, and soon afterwards executed. The principal witness was a sister of Mrs. Matthews, who saw them do the deed. A son of Claudius Smith was executed with him for the same offense, and either then or soon afterwards, another son. Major Nathaniel Strong resided at Blooming Grove, N. Y.

LL.D., b. June 29, 1766, at Mathewsfield, Orange Co., N. Y. (son of James Mathews and Hannah Strong — See subsequent page). [His grandfather Vincent Mathews, bought a fine tract of 700 acres back of New Windsor, N. Y. (near Newburgh), which was called for many years "Mathewsfield." He was made by royal patent clerk of Orange county. In 1702, he went to live on his land, in Orange Co. He d. at New York, aged 84, when on a visit there — just after the evacuation of the city, by the British. He had three sons and two daughters. His sons were: Fletcher, an attorney, in Orange Co.; David, a loyalist, and a mayor of New York, before the Revolution, and who afterwards removed to Nova Scotia; and James who lived on the farm with his father. The wife of Vincent Mathews was a Miss Abeel. The father of Vincent Mathews, Senior, was Peter Mathews, of L. I.]

Gen. Vincent Mathews, studied at the Academy, at Goshen, N. Y. under the care of Noah Webster, the subsequent lexicographer of his country, then a Yankee "school-master abroad" (1781–4), for three years, and then went three years more (1784–6) to a school at Hackensack, N. J., under the care of Peter Wilson — afterwards Prof. in Kings Coll. N. Y. (now Columbia Coll.). In 1786, he went to New York, to study law with Col. Robert Troup, and was admitted to the bar in 1790. He bought in 1793, a farm near Elmira (Newtown), to which he removed what remained of his father's family at that time, and gave the farm to his eldest brother. He was poor at this time, having to borrow money to meet his ordinary expenses, but full of faith in the future, and in the results of willing, earnest work. He went on horseback with a friend, following an Indian path, to Tioga (three miles below Elmira), where he settled. There were but three or four log-houses then in Elmira, in one of which the court was held; board for himself and horse was a dollar per week. He adopted at the outset of his practice the rule which he always followed, that he would never plead a case in court in which his client, as he found, was making a false or unworthy issue — so that his pleas were always accordant with his real convictions. His father and grandfather were members of the Episcopal Church, as was he also; but as the first, and for some time only minister at Elmira, was a Presb. Home Missionary, he welcomed him to his field of pioneer labor, gave him his board in his own family for two years, and at another time paid his salary himself, besides entertaining him without cost in his own house. He was elected twice a member of the N. Y. Legislature (1793 and 1794), and twice State Senator, first, for three years (1796–99), and next, for four years (1799–1803). In 1798, while in the N. Y. Senate, he was appointed by the Legislature in connection with Chief Justice Yates, and Judge James Elliot to settle the titles to "The Military Tract" in what is Onondaga Co., N. Y. A bounty of 600 acres each had been given to the soldiers of the Revolutionary war — the certificates being sold and re-sold by speculators with every kind of fraud. Things were in such confusion, that a dozen claimants often were found to the same title. The commission sat for five years, for four months or more each year at eight dollars per diem, and settled thousands of titles. They generally held their sessions at Albany, but twice also at Aurora, N. Y. He was elected to congress (1809–11). In 1816, he removed to Bath, N. Y., and in 1821, to Rochester, where he d. Aug. 23, 1846. From 1812 to 1817, he was District Attorney for Tioga, Broome, Seneca, Steuben and Alleghany counties, and was engaged in legal practice at Elmira, until 1816, and in Bath, from 1816 to 1821. He was, while in Rochester, District Attorney at different times for about ten years. In 1826, he took his seat in the N. Y. Legislature once more. His removal to Bath was caused by his loss of his large property at Elmira. His military title, by which he was generally known, was obtained in this wise: he was appointed in 1794, Lieut. of Cavalry, under Thomas Morris, as Major, and was successively promoted to be Major, Colonel, and Brig. Genl. His brigade extended to Otsego county, and included all the western counties. He d. at Rochester, Aug. 23, 1846, aged 80; she d. in 1849. [The author although seeking earnestly to do so, could not find one of his descendants who would prepare a good account of their family history.]

S.), 1722 (son of Jacob Green and Dorothy Lynde) grad. at Harvard in 1744, taught school for a year at Sutton, Mass., preached a year on probation at Hanover, N. J. (1745–6), and was ordained and installed there Nov. 1746. To add to the slender support that he received from his people he engaged in 1759, in the practice of medicine* also among them which he continued for 30 years afterwards, until his death. His pastorate at Hanover continued for 45 years (1745–1790). He was a zealous opposer of African slavery, and an earnest advocate of American Independence. He was elected contrary to his strongly expressed wishes a member of the Provincial Congress of New Jersey which set aside the royal government of that province and formed the present constitution of the state and was chairman of the committee which drafted the constitution. He was a man of simple manners, great industry, varied attainments, fervent piety and much success in his work. His preaching was instructive, searching and practical. He was elected in 1758, Vice President of Nassau Hall (Princeton), and was for a few months at the head of that college. He published several sermons. His wife Anna d. of consumption, Nov. 25, 1756; he m. for 2d wife Oct. 19, 1757, Elizabeth Pierson (dau. of Rev. John Pierson of Woodbridge, N. J. pastor there 1714–1752), and granddaughter of Rev. *Says Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Tuttle of this matter in an historical sketch of "The Early Hist. of Presbyterianism in Morris Co., N. J." "Finding his salary insufficient" he was led to "take more worldly care and business on him than he could have chosen, in which secularization of his time he was encouraged by his people who told him that "country congregations could not have have ministers unless they would help support their own families." Accordingly we find him joint-owner in a grist mill and a distillery, the principal of a private school, the legal adviser of his people, drawing their wills and settling their estates, and at the same time practising medicine, so that it was not unusual for him to act at one bedside the threefold part of physician, lawyer and minister.

State prison, associate justice of the New Haven County Court, state commissioner of banks, judge of probate, town clerk, etc. To him the author is indebted for much of the account here given of the descendants of Ephraim Strong and Mary Buckingham. Few men of his years are as hale and fresh as he. He has not lost a meal from sickness in 60 years, nor taken in that time a particle of medicine nor ever had rheumatism nor the toothache. In answer to inquiries by the author he replies "I have had almost constant out-of-door exercise all my life in which it has been my rule to be moderate: I have been always careful to keep my feet dry and warm, and without exception on retiring for the night: I have never used tobacco in any form whatever, and do not know what the taste is, and have abstained entirely from intoxicating liquors for more than 40 years: I have always preferred walking to riding in moving about the town, and if I rode at any time I went on horseback rather than in a carriage." He is about 5ft. 10in. in height, of florid complexion, hair dark brown, and weighs about 170 lbs.

REV. NATHAN STRONG, D.D.

Pastor of the First Church, Hartford, Ct.

Engraved for the American Quarterly Register.

13925–7. ii. Rev. Nathan Strong, D.D. (son of Rev. Nathan Strong of Coventry, Ct.), b. Oct. 5, 1748, O. S., grad. at Yale in 1769, ordained pastor of the First church in Hartford, Ct., Jan. 5, 1774, chaplain in the army of the Revolution. He was tutor at Yale (1772–3). He was settled on a salary of but £130, which was so poorly paid (as poor salaries usually are), that in a few years his people were in debt to him to the amount of £600. He invested a portion of the estate left him by his father in 1795, in a mercantile establishment which came to a disastrous end, and thus suffered much in a pecuniary way for many years. (See Sprague's Annals American Pulpit, vol. II, pp. 34–42). He was an earnest revival preacher, and was several times blessed with large ingatherings into his church. He published several sermons separately from time to time and two volumes of sermons (the first in 1798, and the second in 1800), designed to give aid and direction in revival efforts. He projected and sustained "The Connecticut Evangelical Magazine" continued through 15 years, a work highly prized. He was the chief founder also of "The Conn. Miss. Society," and was its principal manager for several years (1798–1806). In 1796, he published a theological work entitled "The Doctrine of Eternal Misery consistent with the Infinite Benevolence of God." He m. Nov. 20, 1777, Anne Smith b. in 1759 (dau. of Dr. Solomon Smith of Hartford). She d. Oct. 17, 1784, aged 25, leaving two children. He m. for 2d wife Anna McCurdy of Lyme, Ct., b. in 1760 (dau. of John McCurdy b. in Ireland, about 1724, and Anne Lord dau. of Richard Lord of Lyme, Ct., and Elizabeth Lynde) b. June 20, 1787. She d. March 22, 1789, aged 29. He remained for the rest of his life (27 years) a widower. He was a man of very original powers of mind, great self-command, unbounded industry, wide erudition and retentive memory, a man of the first class in all respects. While a man of such superior intellect he was also full of fervor both in his pulpit and in his pastoral work. His sermons were short, but clear and pithy, and he had great facility in extemporizing. He was tall and straight, a man of dark complexion with an impressive eye and striking features, and was full of humor and all but uncontrollable wit at times. Work was but pastime to him. He d. Dec. 25, 1816, aged 68, in the 43d year of his ministry.

13995–6. iii. HENRY STRONG, LL.D. (son of Rev. Dr. Joseph Strong of Norwich, Ct., and Mary Huntington) b. Aug. 23, 1788, graduated at Yale in 1806, and tutor there (1808–10); m. July 7, 1825, Eunice Edgerton Huntington of Norwich, b. Sept. 13, 1797 (dau. of Joseph Huntington and Eunice Carew): a lawyer at Norwich, having no superior in the state in his profession. He was a man of fine native abilities, of untiring industry and of thorough integrity and honor. He was of a sanguine temperament, which was well balanced by a clear, calm judgment and a strong will. His perceptions were quick, his habits of reasoning clear and logical, and his views comprehensive. As a public speaker he had great command of language and force of manner. He was domestic and studious in his habits, rather than social, and sought not the honor which comes from men. With the exception of his reluctant acceptance of a seat in two or three instances in the Connecticut legislature, he uniformly declined all overtures of political preferment. He was invited to a professorship of law in Yale College which he also refused. Self-suspicious, and never making any profession of religion, he yet died in the hope of the gospel. Those were days in which few realized, even in the church, that God is "plenteous in mercy," and that so much does he welcome anything in the human heart that is right towards him that "he breaks not the bruised reed nor quenches the smoking flax." He was liberal in the use of his wealth for the good of others, and loved especially to contribute to the funds of the missionary and benevolent societies of the day and to those most whose aims and efforts were most directly evangelical.

"He justly valued his ancestry; not with the vanity which attempts to build a reputation upon distinguished names, with little admixture of personal worth; but for the real advantages which it afforded him for the attainment of personal excellence." He d. Nov. 12, 1852.

He was a farmer at Northampton until Aug. 24, 1696, when he removed to Lebanon, Ct., when there were but four white families in it. He was killed by Indians at Wood Creek, N. Y., Oct. 12, 1709, aged 42. She d. Nov. 20, 1732, aged 69. No one's name appears oftener on the early records of Lebanon, as a committee-man on various matters of public interest. The following letter, written to his son Stephen (then aged 19), a few months previous to his death, will interest his descendants :

"Son Stephen :

"Hearty love to you, hoping you are well; as I am, blessed be God for it. I have nothing of news to write to you. I wrote a letter to your mother yesterday, and therein all the news I have; but yet I gladly take the opportunity to write a word to you, as a testification of my love to you. I hope you will be mindful of the advice I left you. Be tender of, and obedient to your mother. I hope you take care of affairs at home; they are but little in my thoughts; but I daily mind you, and God forbid that I should cease to pray for you daily. I want such opportunity for it as I had at home. Dear son, pray for yourself and for me also. Give my respects to your mother. What I here say to you, I herein say to the rest of my dear ones. Also my affectionate love to my dear daughter. Naught else.

I remain your affectionate father,
